Ferry fare up, timing called 'a disaster'

Ferry fares for vehicles and their drivers are going up June 16 by 12 per cent and a further rate hike is in the works, Transportation Minister Alex Fraser announced today.

This time around there are no increases for passengers or bus riders.

He said the VIC sent several letters to Fraser begging him to increase fares only once a year at the most and only in the fall.

"Large amounts of money are spent sending out ferry information to tourist agencies and now all the data is out of date on the eve of the peak tourist season," he said.

Wood said he is not concerned about the amount of the increase but said the timing is a severe jolt to the tourist industry.

Bill Anderson, transportation director for the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce, said the increase seems moderate.

He said he has no objections as long as the increases are justified to the public and each increase is small.

The markup in ferry fares is probably the first of a series planned by the provincial government to cope with soaring fuel costs, Fraser indicated.

When the rates go up again and by how much, depends on the cost of fuel.

If oil prices take off again, ferry fares will have to tag behind, Fraser indicated.

The minister said the B.C. Ferry Corp. will monitor costs monthly during the summer and will take another look at its rate structure in the fall.

"Any change would take place probably when we are back to normal — say around the first of November."

He said fares will not be adjusted any more frequently than twice a year.

The vehicle and driver fare increases range from 25 cents on the minor routes to $1 on the major Georgia Strait routes.

For example, the charge for a driver and car travelling from Swartz Bay to Tsawwassen will rise to $13 from $12.

From Swartz Bay to Salt Spring, the fare goes to $6.50 from $6 and from Brentwood Bay to Mill Bay, the car-and-driver rate will be $3.25 instead of $3.

Freight rates are also increased. The tariff charged commercial vehicles will jump from $1.10 per foot to $1.40 on major routes.

"The ferry system will still provide the best travel bargain around," Fraser said.

And he made it clear the government has opted for the velvet glove approach to ferry fares this time around.

The last time, in 1976, it was very much the iron fist method.

Fares were doubled and the public was enraged. The government reduced fares slightly in 1977.

Today's changes are the first increases since that time.

The government's annual subsidy to the ferry corporation is expected to be $49 million this year, up $3 million from 1979.

But fuel costs alone are up $7 million from last year and the fare increases will bring in less than $2 million, he said.

"We are anticipating additional revenue resulting from projected increases in traffic. That additional business will assist us in offsetting the deficit."

If fares weren't increased, Fraser said the deficit could lead to a deterioration in the quality and frequency of ferry service.

Late start on ferries

Ferry service between Nanaimo's Departure Bay and Horseshoe Bay began one hour later than usual this morning as ferry workers took part in a study session held to protest proposed pension changes.

The B.C. Ferry Corp. had sought Thursday to have the action ruled illegal but the Labor Relations Board rejected the corporation's contention.

The 6:30 a.m. sailing from Departure Bay was delayed one hour and further delays were expected during the day as three other study sessions were planned.

However, ferry management has scheduled the final run of the day for 11 p.m., only one hour later than usual.

A B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union spokesman admitted it was difficult to see how there could be only an hour delay at the end of the day when four study sessions of one hour each were planned.

But he said the jumbo ferries could make up some of the lost time and one scheduled sailing to Langdale had been cancelled.

The spokesman said the ferry workers will also take part in some action to protest the pension changes next Tuesday and on June 16, the days protest rallies are planned for Vancouver and Victoria respectively.

Details of what disruptions the public can expect will be announced well in advance, he said, adding that the action at the other terminals will be different than at Departure Bay.

The public sector unions are protesting proposed amendments to pension statutes which would limit cost-of-living indexing and increase employee contributions.

A-G orders probe of shooting

By JAKE BANKY

Attorney-General Allan Williams has ordered a thorough study of allegations that a fugitive was deliberately shot through the head after he gave himself up following a shoot-out with Saanich police in 1978.

After receiving a preliminary report from his staff, Williams said Thursday the case of Thomas Lackey is being very seriously considered because implicit in the allegations is the suggestion of criminal misconduct.

No time limit has been set on the review of the case by Associate Deputy Attorney-General Neil McDiarmid which falls far short of the full public inquiry urged by Lackey's lawyer, Craig Paterson of Vancouver.

However one of Paterson's major concerns apparently will be satisfied.

Williams indicated the Saanich police board will be forced to release the gunshot report on the shooting incident which it has refused to make public.

"I will be communicating with Mayor (Mel) Couvelier as chairman of the police board with respect to the report and what if any action his board proposes to take," said Williams.

He said McDiarmid also will receive a report from the Crown counsel who handled the case as well as transcripts of statements made by defence counsel.

Lackey was convicted of a series of crimes, including the attempted murder of Sgt. William Hillcoat in the shoot-out at McKenzie and Cedar Hill Cross Road, Nov. 8, 1978.

Lackey was sentenced to 18 years in prison. He is now at the regional psychiatric centre near Abbotsford, undergoing treatment for injuries received in the gun battle.

Hillcoat received a shotgun blast in the stomach and thighs. He is back at work now, but still has 36 shotgun pellets in his body.

At a police debriefing session in February this year, Hillcoat and Const. Robert Love were exonerated of any wrongdoing.

The session was told Love had Lackey by the hair, with his revolver pointed at Lackey's head, when the wounded Hillcoat stumbled into them, causing the gun to go off.

Gibbons charged that it was an attempted execution, not an accident.

Paterson, who represented Lackey in an unrelated civil matter prior to the shooting, wrote to Williams last month urging a public inquiry be held.

Gibbons also has supported such a move, as has Dr. Michael Jackson, professor of criminal law at the University of Victoria.

Constitution in year: PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday he wants a new constitution within a year.

He made the statement after New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent unsuccessfully introduced a motion in the Commons calling for a new constitution by July 1, 1981.

Some Progressive Conservative MPs appeared to yell "no," defeating the motion which required unanimous consent to be debated, even though it apparently had been approved by party officials. Ray Hnatyshyn, former Tory energy minister, later said the Conservatives were not responsible for defeating the motion.

Trudeau also agreed with a request by Opposition Leader Joe Clark to hold a parliamentary debate on constitutional change before the Commons adjourns for the summer, possibly at the end of July.

But he indicated he will not allow the debate to take place if the premiers object.

Trudeau, under fire from Clark, said the government is not considering a national referendum on constitutional change "at this time."

He recalled he had introduced a bill two years ago allowing the government to conduct such a referendum, but the bill was never passed and he is not planning to revive it now.

However, he added: "I am not saying the matter is discarded forever."

Clark has suggested Trudeau is out to sabotage constitutional talks with the premiers, which begin Monday, by appearing unwilling to move on provincial demands. Trudeau would then go directly to the people for a verdict on his own package of reforms.

Trudeau said he has not made any specific proposals to the provinces for constitutional change and has not received any from them since the last constitutional conference in February, 1979.

Ray Perrault, government leader in the Senate, also agreed to a constitutional debate in the upper chamber and denied Opposition suggestions the government will conduct a referendum if there is no speedy agreement with the premiers on reforms.

Victim's estate must pay

MONTREAL (CP) — The estate and former employer of a man decapitated by a helicopter blade have been ordered to pay $20,072 to repair the aircraft and compensate its owners for money lost during the time it was grounded.

David Lee was killed in 1971 in northern Quebec when he walked into the helicopter blade after alighting to collect soil samples.

The court said Lee caused his own death by failing to observe elementary safety precautions.

Cross carrier goes missing

CALGARY (CP) — City police are investigating the disappearance of a Vancouver man attempting to drag a 50-kilogram cross across Canada.

Lloyd Lummis, 32, left Vancouver April 7 — Easter Monday — dragging a wooden cross, 2.4 metres by 4.5 metres, with a small wheel at the lower end.

"The power of the Holy Spirit" came to him last September and asked him to make the journey, he said before he left.

"The cross is meant to travel in the world of action," he said. "So many people need encouragement or evidence that Christ is real."

Officials said Lummis took about a month to reach here. About two weeks later, his cross was found lying at the bottom of a large hill under a railway bridge. Also found were two elastic cords Lummis used to attach a small knapsack to the cross.

Police nip $1,000 pyramid scheme

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver police hope they have nipped in the bud a pyramid scheme that began in California and swept up the west coast into Vancouver.

Vice squad members have raided a Main Street hall and arrested four Americans suspected of operating a pyramid scheme.

Three of them, released pending charges, fled back to the United States on Thursday, but one remains in custody. No names were released.

Police said that before the Wednesday night raid, about 100 people — businessmen, students, housewives — were listening to a pitch from a group calling itself California Business Concept.

Many of the people were clutching envelopes containing $1,000, money they hoped to multiply when their number was called and they could join a pyramid.

Under the scheme, the pyramid contains 32 people, all of whom contribute $1,000, except one, the leader.

At the outset, one person recruits two friends, each of whom pay him $500. They in turn each recruit two others, who pay them $500 each and the leader $500. This continues until 32 people are recruited.

When the pyramid is filled, the leader makes $16,000, with no investment at all. Then the pyramid splits and those on the second level begin new ones and so on.

The idea swept California recently where hundreds of thousands of people went to pyramid parties, hoping to turn a quick profit.

Police in Los Angeles and about 30 other municipalities began raiding the parties, citing a California statute that bans so-called "endless chains." Hundreds of people who had never been in trouble with the law before were arrested.

Police say pyramids are a classic con game, based on greed and mathematics which most people don't take into account.

A person is safe if they're at the top of the first pyramid. But because of exponential multiplication, a total of about 33 million people would be required to fill all the pyramids by the sixth split.

Congress quashes Carter gas tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Senate, following the lead of the House of Representatives, today overrode President Carter's veto and crushed his 10-cent-a-gallon gasoline fee.

The vote was 68 to 10, well above the two-thirds majority needed to brush aside Carter's veto of a congressional measure repealing the fee.

It was the first time a Democratic-controlled Congress has failed to sustain a Democratic president's veto since President Truman was overidden in 1952.

Carter vetoed the bill Thursday, saying the fee was needed to help conserve imported petroleum. But two hours later and with no debate, the House voted 335 to 34 to override the veto.

Today's Senate vote administered the final death blow. While either chamber of Congress can sustain a veto, two-third votes in both houses are needed to override one.

The Senate margin was narrower than the nearly 10-to-1 override vote in the House. The original Senate vote rejecting the fee and setting up the veto confrontation was 73 to 16.

As in the House, a large number of Senate Democrats joined with Republicans to override the veto.

Carter cast 21 previous vetoes, all of which were sustained. Although no Democratic president had been overriden since 1952, Republican Presidents Dwight Eisenhower, Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford had a total of 19 vetoes overidden.

Democrats have controlled both houses of Congress for the better part of the last 50 years.

In his veto message Thursday, the president told Congress that while he knows the fee is politically unpopular, members should rise above politics and let him impose it. He called the levy an important step in oil conservation, "good policy and good common sense."

His veto took two hours to reach the House and two minutes to discuss. "We've talked the matter to death," said Representative Al Ullman (Dem. Ore.), chairman of the ways and means committee, as the roll call was ordered.

Carter wanted the fee to help the U.S. begin withdrawing from its eight-million-barrel-a-day consumption of foreign oil. But opponents — Democrats as well as Republicans — called the fee a $10.3-billion tax on drivers that would serve little purpose but to help balance the budget.

The president announced the fee last March 15 and it was to have gone into effect May 15. But a federal judge blocked it, saying Carter overstepped his authority in trying to place the levy on all gasoline instead of limiting it to oil imports.

The administration is appealing that order. However, an override of Carter's veto might make the outcome of that appeal a moot issue. It was not immediately known whether government lawyers planned to pursue the appeal if the veto is overturned.

Tornado city sealed off

Law enforcement officers and the 260 National Guardsmen helping patrol the streets are erecting barricades at all entrances to the city to keep away looters and sightseers over the weekend.

An 8 p.m.-to-6 a.m. curfew remains in effect.

At least four persons were killed during Tuesday night's furious assault by as many as seven twisters and two other residents died after suffering heart attacks while cleaning up the mess. The death toll may go higher as there are still at least 70 persons listed as missing. Initially officials feared as many as 35 persons had died in the twisted wreckage.

Four people have been arrested for violating the curfew or petty theft and one for assaulting a police officer.

While the city strove to return to normal, Mayor Robert Kriz said officials were worried about the possibility of fire breaking out in the city, which had been without water pressure for nearly 48 hours.

Meanwhile, scores of volunteers, including private construction firms with heavy equipment, began biting into the rubble that covers five separate areas of devastation.

City officials continued to urge residents to conserve water, flushing toilets no more than once or twice a day. They also advised people to boil tap water.

Afghan rebels reported mounting major attack

NEW DELHI (AP) — Afghan rebels were reported today to have massed a huge force in mountains as close as 21 kilometres to Kabul and plane travellers arriving here said Soviet military units are preparing to defend the Afghan capital.

Other plane passengers reaching India from Afghanistan were unable to confirm the information. However, a separate report from a Kabul source believed reliable confirmed that insurgents have gathered in the Paghman mountains west of the capital in what was described as preparation to attack a Soviet troop base.

The arriving traveller, an Afghan who requested that he not be named, estimated that 20,000 insurgents from Bamian and Wardhak, central provinces seething with guerrilla activity, were converging near the capital.

They now are entrenched in the Paghman mountains and skirmishes with Russian troops have already begun, the traveller said.

The Soviets have moved tanks and troops in position to defend the outskirts of Kabul and city residents have heard exchanges of fire, he added. These reports could not be independently confirmed. Afghanistan has expelled Western reporters.

Some 85,000 Soviet troops were poured into Afghanistan in December to help the Marxist regime there put down a rebellion by anti-Communist Moslem tribesmen who control much of the countryside.

The traveller also confirmed earlier reports of heavy fighting in the Pech Valley and other parts of Kunar province, in eastern Afghanistan.

Gold back above $600 level

LONDON (AP) — The price of gold broke the $600-an-ounce level for the first time in three months in Western Europe today. Silver prices rose $1.02 an ounce to a two-month high of $17.02.

The value of the U.S. dollar was mostly lower in quiet trading.

In Zurich, the price of gold had risen to $605.50 U.S. ($699 Canadian) by noon, highest since March 7, after closing at $587.50 on Thursday.

In London, the metal was quoted at $602.50 a troy ounce at mid-afternoon, up from the morning fixing of $598 and Thursday's closing price of $587.

Prices were still well below gold's all-time record $850 an ounce in mid-January following the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and the sudden worsening in global tensions.

Tree rips bus, two injured

Two Washington state women received minor injuries Thursday when the sightseeing bus in which they were riding was pierced by an oak tree.

Police said tourists Dorothy Woodard, 54, of Port Angeles and Rose Plummer, 29, of Seattle were injured when the double-decker bus struck the overhanging limb on Craigdarroch near Joan Crescent.

Six other passengers escaped injury.

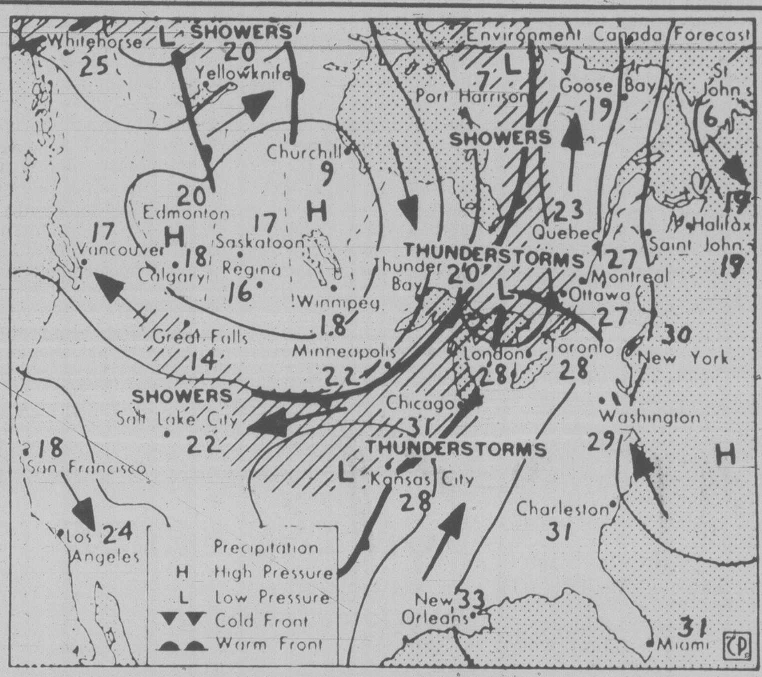

Map valid until noon Saturday

Skies were generally cloudy across the southern portion of the province early today with showers reported at a few localities. Drier air continued moving south over northern B.C. with the result that central interior and north coast regions remained relatively cloud free. The weather pattern is expected to change little today. However, drier air is slowly workng its way southwards and the trend is for gradually decreasing clouds and somewhat milder temperatures for southern B.C. during the weekend.

Protest rallies took place today in Courtenay and Nanaimo.

Meanwhile, Norm Thornber, ferry corporation labor relations manager, today accused union president Shirley Mathieson of stirring up an old grudge in remarks she made Thursday to the legislature's Crown Corporations Committee.

Mathieson said labor problems in the corporation can be traced to the appointment of Thornber, a former union executive member, about two years ago.

Many of the 2,700 ferry workers look upon him as a turncoat and feel he is now in a position to settle old scores, she said.

Thornber has made it clear in the past he disagrees with Mathieson's leadership.

He left the union when the faction he supported was defeated by a new group headed by Mathieson.

"I don't think what the president of the union is doing is conducive to good labor-management relations," Thornber said today.

"She's going over an old grudge. I thought that was all over."

Thornber said the corporation's lawyers are studying some of Mathieson's remarks to see whether they are libellous.

He said the union president must have been speaking tongue-in-cheek to the legislative committee because she has no proof that he has used his position to settle old scores.

"I'm quite sure she can't come up with one vindictive action that I've taken," he said.

As far as Mathieson's remarks that he is distrusted by members of the fleet, Thornber said he feels a check with the employees will show the opposite is true.

"At least now they have someone they can talk to, someone who will respond."

Thornber said possibly the reason Mathieson is a little upset is "because I don't roll over and play dead every time she throws her hat in the ring."

Will insurance firms decide lawyers' fate?

HARRISON HOT SPRINGS (CP) — If damage claims against lawyers continue to increase, insurance companies might wind up deciding who practises law, the Law Society of B.C. has been told.

So the society is considering requiring the province's 4,500 lawyers to take annual refresher courses.

Bar associations in eight U.S states have adopted mandatory continuing legal education, and eight more will establish schemes by 1985, lawyers were told at their annual meeting.

The B.C. profession offers 99 continuing legal education courses, but attendance is voluntary.

Lawyers at the conference noted that some members of the profession fail to advance, or even maintain, what they have learned. As a result, the competence of some lawyers is seriously questioned, and the association has formed a competency committee.

Claims against the lawyers' liability insurance fund, the scheme by which they protect themselves against damage suits from clients, now average 22 a month, the conference was told.

The increasing number of claims could cause a situation in which insurance companies in effect decide who will practise law, says lawyer Bruce McLoughlin, because "insurers ready to take on this kind of insurance are rare and will certainly withdraw as claims mount to beyond the premium income."

"We might then reach the situation where the insurer would determine who could practise law, or the government itself might have to be involved. Either would mean the end of the independence of the bar."

The liability insurance fund, in which all lawyers must participate, provides up to $100,000 for each claim, with certain deductibles. The society pays the first $35,000 a claim, to a maximum $750,000 a year.

The lawyers suggested that the name of any practitioner who draws heavily on the insurance fund be passed to the competency committee which would examine the lawyer's practice and suggest remedies.

Rain cuts forest fire risk

Rain throughout B.C. in the past week has reduced the number of forest fires but the fire hazard in the north coast region is high because of a drying trend, the forests ministry said Thursday.

There are 120 fires burning in the province, 78 of them in the Prince George region. All fires are under control.

Slides close road

LYTTON (CP) — One lane of the Trans-Canada Highway has been reopened following several mudslides Thursday about 25 kilometres north of this Fraser Canyon community.

RCMP said no injuries were reported, but the highway was closed for several hours while crews cleared mud and debris brought down by recent heavy rains.

No milfoil 2,4-D

VERNON (CP) — Milfoil at the north end of Wood Lake will not be treated with the herbicide 2,4-D as planned this spring, Greg Armour, of the watern investigation branch, said Thursday. Weather has not been suitable to achieve positive results.

Police racism probe sought

VANCOUVER (CP) — Attorney-General Allan Williams will be asked to look into a nine-month-old complaint against city police alleging the use of obscene, racist language and excessive force in dealing with three blacks, a black citizens' group says.

The Black Solidarity Association will petition Williams for an inquiry into the conduct of police officers in the incident, and the failure of the police department to act on a citizen's complaint, members Paul Winn, George Jolly and Jim Pannell said Thursday.

Constable R.P. Ferguson admitted in a trial arising out of the incident he used the term "f-----g nigger" while attempting to search Lawrence Mason, a 24-year-old black man at his home Aug. 8, 1979.

But he denied allegations, raised during the trial that acquitted Mason and his mother on charges of assault and possession of a dangerous weapon, that he had used excessive force.

Court transcripts show the incident began when Constable Douglas Miller arrived, backed up by Ferguson and Constable Douglas Ellis with a police dog, responding to a "man-with-gun" call.

They said they immediately saw a black man walking toward the front of the house and found a gun in the seat of his pants.

They heard yelling from the rear of the house and went to a basement door. When there was no reply to knocks and kicks at the door, they said, they kicked in the door.

Mason disputed Ferguson's right to search him.

Broadcast trial to continue

VANCOUVER (CP) — Justice H.C. McKay rejected on Thursday a defence motion to throw out charges of conspiring to limit competition laid against 10 Vancouver-area broadcast outlets and six individuals.

The B.C. Supreme Court judge gave no reason for his decision and the trial was adjourned until Monday to give the defence more time to prepare its case.

The Crown has concluded its arguments. It contends the radio and television stations agreed not to accept advertising from agencies not accredited by the Canadian Association of Broadcasters.

McClelland vows fight against petro tax hike

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial government will fight attempts by Ottawa to impose additional tax burdens on the oil and gas producing provinces, B.C. Energy Minister Bob McClelland said Thursday.

In a speech to 300 members of the Vancouver Board of Trade, the minister accused Ottawa of concentrating on export taxes aimed overwhelmingly against Alberta and B.C.

Stating that Ottawa revenue requirements are fueled by subsidies necessary to buy the favor of eastern voters, McClelland said the federal government should increase the price of oil to raise needed cash.

Gas tax revenue, declared McClelland, "is simply the handiest means Ottawa has to reduce its staggering deficit." And even one of federal Energy Minister Marc Lalonde's people has said, "it's the biggest pile of free money lying around."

"Ottawa seems to be saying 'We created the problem of taxing oil; now, to fill the hole our oil policy created, we'll tax gas.'

"Well, the government of British Columbia says stop."

He said income taxe is the way the federal government should create revenue.

"We have always believed that progressive taxation on the incomes of persons and corporations is the fairest way for all governments to raise revenues."

McClelland is to meet Lalonde next week to discuss further a new oil and gas pricing agreement between Ottawa and the provinces.

Overseas tourism up 41%

The number of overseas visitors to B.C. in March rose 41 per cent over the same month last year, Tourism Minister Pat Jordan said Thursday.

This continues the trend of large increases over the past few years, she said, adding that overseas visitors to the province have doubled in the past five years.

American visitors increased more than 25 per cent in March compared with the same month last year and traffic from other provinces increased.

Hotels, restaurants and retail outlets have benefited considerably from the increased tourist trade, she said.

TO SMOKE
OR NOT TO SMOKE.

There's a good chance that you've been giving some serious thought to smoking. The question is, what are you going to do about it? If you've never smoked, or if you've quit smoking, we're not urging you to start.

But if you're a smoker who's not ready to give up the enjoyment you get from smoking, we'd like to call your attention to Vantage.

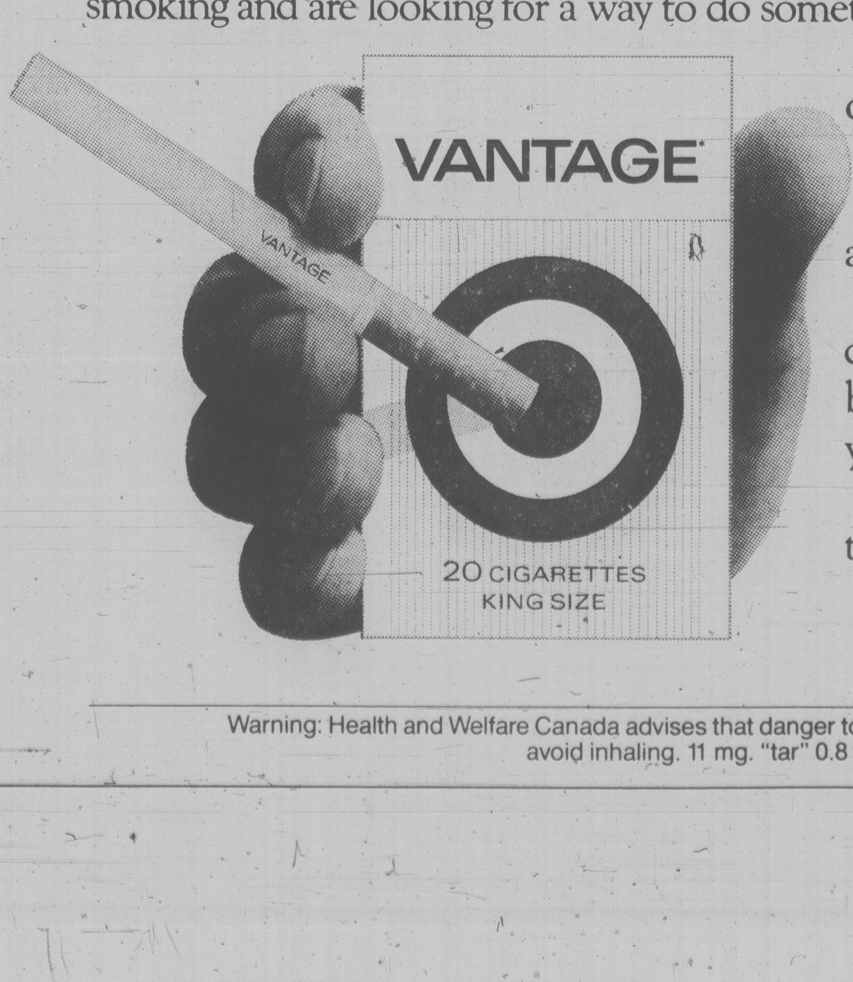
Vantage is the cigarette for people who may have had second thoughts about smoking and are looking for a way to do something about it.

Vantage cuts down substantially on what you may not want, without cutting out that satisfying tobacco flavour you've come to appreciate.

Now Vantage isn't the only cigarette of its kind you can smoke, but it may well be the only one you'll enjoy.

To put it simply, Vantage still tastes like a cigarette.

Vantage. That is the answer.



Warning: Health and Welfare Canada advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked—avoid inhaling. 11 mg. "tar" 0.8 mg. nicotine.

Prescription problems

The B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons has a job to do today.

The job is to begin immediately the review recommended by a Sidney coroner's jury into doctors' procedures for prescribing mood-altering drugs.

The jury, responding to a suggestion from Chris Considine, lawyer for the victim's family, expressed particular concern about the practice, apparently often used by doctors, of prescribing these drugs over the phone in response to a patient's complaints, rather than insisting first on an examination of the patient.

The tragic consequences of the practice were made clear to the jury during the three-night inquest into the death of Billy Jones. The jury found that Jones drowned when he fell into a North Saanich creek at a time when his normal abilities were impaired by a high level of the prescription drug Elavil in his system.

Just how and when Jones took the Elavil was never discovered during the inquest testimony. All the evidence showed that he was not a drug abuser. But the evidence also showed that Elavil was readily available at a house party which he attended the night of his death.

The Elavil had been prescribed earlier in the day to Jones' girlfriend, a long-term drug abuser, by a doctor over the phone. The girl testified she had phoned the doctor, complained of sleeplessness, restlessness and emotional problems, and received a prescription for Elavil and Valium, another tranquilizer. The girl testified also that her real purpose in obtaining the prescriptions was to use them to "get high," and that she had eaten them, along with some other pills she had bought elsewhere, "like candy" at the party in question.

The prescription was inappropriate in the circumstances. Evidence showed the girl had a 10-year history of drug abuse; she had criminal convictions for drug offences; and she had a past history of drug overdoses.

The prescription of any mood-altering drugs over the phone to such a patient was probably asking for trouble. The prescription of them in quantities large enough to be eaten like candy was a mistake.

Yet it would be unfair to blame the individual doctor in the case. He was simply following a practice that is apparently far from uncommon in our community and throughout the province. The girl admitted that she had, on other occasions, received similar prescriptions under similar circumstances, from several other doctors.

It is tragic that a young man had to die before the risks of these procedures were brought to public attention.

It will be much more tragic if, despite the death, the procedures are not tightened up.

Let's just suppose for a moment that Communications Minister Pat McGeer's message on television satellite signals is picked up by his federal counterpart in Ottawa, Francis Fox.

Legalized rifling of satellite broadcasts could well lead to a proliferation of dish antennas. Canadians would have the opportunity of tuning in to an infinite variety of American television shows orginating in any one of a hundred U.S. cities. Miami, Altlanta, Phoenix, and San Francisco, would all be only as far away as one's television set.

But while McGeer may feel he is pioneering the solution to one electronic problem, he is also creating another. With so many channels and stations to chose from, how on earth (and in space) will anyone know what's on television prior to actually turning on the set. The only thing that separates the TV zombie from the sane viewer is the weekly television guide.

As yet McGeer hasn't discovered a way to compile the television listings for all the stations available via dish. Even if it were possible, the result would be a weekly television guide thicker, and as time consuming to read, as the weekend New York Times.

If McGeer's vision came to pass, one could also expect a new TV series based on the new Canadian national pastime. It would be known as The Flickers and nobody would know when it's on.

RICHARD GWYN

Finance Minister MacEachen on the prowl for more tax revenue.

OTTAWA — If any of us is overweight, we can do one of two things. Go on a diet. Buy a new set of clothes.

The Trudeau government is overweight. It is about to buy itself a new set of clothes. The difference, a minor matter, is that you, Sir-Ms., will be paying for it.

Overweight isn't quite the word to describe Ottawa's condition. Any adjective on the scale from porcine to elephantine would fit better. This year's budget deficit has been estimated by Finance Ministar Allan MacEachen at $14 billion. Ottawa thus is spending one-quarter more than it takes in in revenues.

Before the year is ended, the deficit almost certainly will get larger. The economic recession, which either has started already or is about to, will reduce Ottawa's revenues (those who are out of work don't pay taxes) and will expand its expenditures (those who are out of work draw unemployment insurance).

Limited choices

All of this is the good news. The bad news is that, according to the Conference Board in Canada, even if we enjoyed full employment and had wrestled inflation to the ground, which is the stuff of which dreams are made, Ottawa still would be in the red by $5 billion and counting. (The board's calculations are a couple of years old.)

The case being made by everyone here, from Pierre Trudeau to MacEachen to deputy-finance minister Ian Stewart, is that to get its accounts into order, Ottawa, because it cannot decrease its spending, has no choice but to increase taxes.

To a point, this case actually happens to be correct. At 42 per cent of the Gross National Product, total spending by governments in Canada is not at all out of line with the budgets of other western democracies. Spending in the U.S. is lower, but mostly so for lack of a Medicare program.

But only to a point. Since 1976, Ottawa has exercised what it calls "restraint" in its spending. This has meant only that, after a great deal of huffing and puffing, Ottawa has racheted back its yearly increase in spending to the increase in the nation's economic output, more or less. All it's done, therefore, has been to prevent things from getting worse.

During its brief term, the Conservative government aimed at some ambitious spending-cut targets: A cut of civil service payrolls by 60,000; revising social security programs to eliminate payments to those who don't need them; selling off some Crown corporations, which in a sneaky way, have piled up $1.2 billion in "off-budget" borrowing since 1976 to make the government's accounts look better than they really are.

Enter, re-enter rather, the Liberals. No more talk of spending cuts. The topic has become as old-fashioned as "participatory democracy." Indeed, the tilt is to spending increases: To avoid a postal strike, Ottawa caved in to a settlement with the inside workers that in its first year may amount — this is Sinclair Stevens' calculation — to as much as 26 per cent.

Here's the point. A tax increase is needed. But the specific one that Trudeau and MacEachen and Stewart are talking up is the worst possible one — the "de-indexing" of income taxes so that individuals whose salaries increase by no more than the rate of inflation, and hence in real terms do not increase at all, still would be stuck for more income tax.

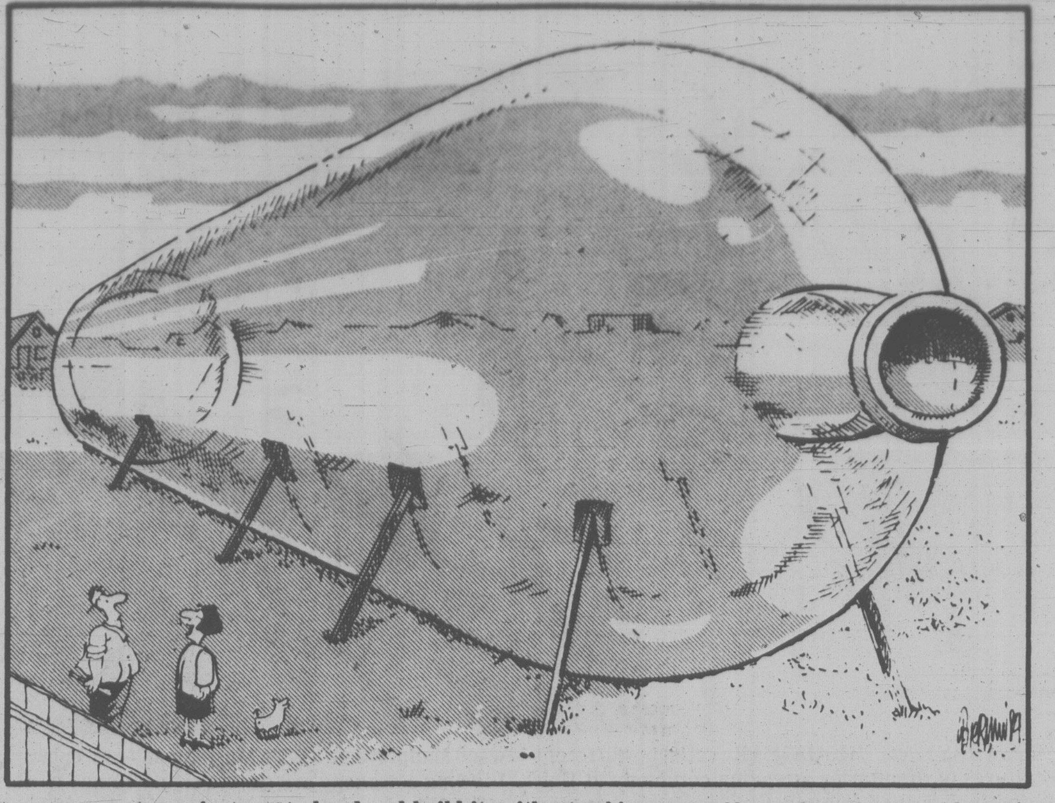
If income taxes are "de-indexed", Ottawa will acquire a vested interest in inflation, because its revenues will increase, automatically and relatively painlessly, from one year to the next.

This "inflation revenue bonus" was the principal reason why John Turner, then finance minister, indexed taxes back in 1973. Only subsequently, did Ottawa exercise some restraint in its spending, but then unhinged its accounts by a series of pre-election tax cuts, which reduced its revenues.

Business hypocrisy

One way or another, we are going to have to pay for the new suit of clothes that Ottawa needs. We must admit as well that we encouraged Ottawa to spend more upon us that it should have: The other day, Liam O'Brien, chairman of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, criticized businessmen for their "hypocrisy" in demanding spending cuts in general but particular subsidies for themselves.

Two things, surely, need to be done. Before any tax increase, Ottawa must come clean about its spending. Why, for instance, other than as vote-getters, should social security payments continue to be universal? It's nice for middle-class matrons to receive family allowance cheques, but if we can't afford it, which we can't, it's just too bad. As well, Ottawa must come clean about its tax increases: Hit us, not so much where it hurts (it will anywhere), but where we can see it — preferably, above the belt.



"... you mean you just went ahead and build it, without asking yourself once how they would get the 'Maggie' in there?"

Call for peace

In this time of heightening tensions between the contending superpowers since the oil problem, the Iran crisis and the Afghanistan episode, it was good to have your recent editorial calling for peace and disarmament as the most realistic program, and also a requirement, for world survival.

With the same aim, the Victoria Presbytery of the United Church in April sent to the forthcoming meeting of its General Council a petition asking that committees on peace and disarmament be established in every congregation and that the church orient its members to look toward and work for a world regime of peace and justice as an expression of the Kingdom of God in world relationships. It regarded this as a mandate of the Gospel to our human race, and not another occasion of wishful thinking.

In the light of such views it must be disturbing to note the recent report that CIDA, our national arm for aid to developing nations, is to be asked to undertake military aid and police training in substitution for economic aid to certain Caribbean islands. This seems reprehensible policy on the part of the external affairs department in shifting from a democratic to an imperialistic posiition which would weaken the economy of these island, and make them less able to engage in trade with other nations, thus weakening them and us as well. This can hardly appeal to Canadian taxpayers, especially people of goodwill who realize the danger of the spread of militarism. — Harold T. Allen, 2140 Kings Road.

Minimum wage

I refer to the recent announcement by the labor minister raising the minimum wage rate on July 1 and December 1 by approximately 22 per cent. The minister obviously accepts the widely-held fallacy that government can legislate us into prosperity and full employment by enacting wage rates, when, in truth, real wages have to be earned, and are the result of producing goods and services.

Whatever happened to the Socred ministry of deregulation?

While many small businesses are reeling under the weight of rising costs and high interest rates, the provincial government makes it more difficult now for students, the elderly, handicapped and other disadvantaged persons to find employment in the private, productive sector of the economy. It is the private sector which carries the burden of government, so that one cannot expect government to find unlimited funds for employing people who should otherwise be able to offer their services at a discount. Even at low wage rates, they would have the pride and satisfaction of contributing to their keep.

It is tragic that our politicians, in spite of their highly-paid economists, have yielded to pressure from interested groups who seek, not the good of the whole community, but the well-being of those already in safe, secure jobs.

The sooner the press and public understand this economic fact, the sooner the minister will be able to withstand misguided influences. — Monica Coombs, 1960 Waterloo Road.

Municipal bonds

I have a brother who lives in Texas who told me that U.S. citizens are permitted to purchase municipal bonds yielding from six to seven per cent which are non-taxable with the provision that the interest per year is not $5,000 or over. This means that countless numbers of people in the higher income brackets are buying these bonds and finding them more beneficial than those interest investment yielding 10 per cent or more which are taxable.

These bonds put municipalities in a better financial position permitting some to give greater savings in property taxes to senior citizens which keeps a lot from requiring welfare assistance. This is more efficient than our Provincial Home Owners Grant.

San Antonio is even operating four excellent municipal golf courses where the green fees are only $1 per game on weekdays for senior citizens or $3 on weekdays and $4 weekends for other adults.

Mayor Couvelier of Saanich could take a look at Saanich's Cedar Hill Golf Course operation where they expect it to be a profit making business with coffee at 40 cents per cup and beer at $1.10 per bottle. Green fees (other than those paying annual dues) are $7 weekdays and $8 on weekends. It should be a recreation centre operated on a break-even basis for the benefit of people both healthwise and recreation wise. Senior citizens even get a better break on the four municipal courses in Greater Vancouver.

I think it is high time that the mayors and reeves of municipalities, get together and demand legislation to permit the issuing of such non-taxable bonds in Canada. — R. W. Ball, 3809 Hobbs Street.

Rent controls

On April 15 you published an article by Ab Kent on additional rent increases for a new purchaser of an existing building. I would like to clarify our policy with respect to approving rent increases greater than the general annual limit.

All increases in operating costs and all increases in financing costs, due to renegotiating a mortgage, can be passed on to a tenant upon application. However, a new purchaser who buys a property knowing the existing revenues, the existing expenses and the rent increase restrictions, may find that we will not automatically rectify a cash flow problem caused by increasing the principal of the mortgage. To do so would enable any level of rent increase to be justified just by a new owner taking out a large enough mortgage. We will, however, allow any increases in costs or financing charges incurred after the purchase decision was made to be passed on. We would also review the rents after the new owner had operated it for a while.

Surely, if a prudent businessperson is contemplating purchasing an existing building knowing it is under rent controls, and knowing there may be a cash flow problem, he or she would apply for any required relief prior to making the purchase decision.

The rent control system in B.C. is extremely liberal. This is reflected in the almost non-existent bankruptcy rate and the fact that existing buildings are currently selling at about the highest ever multiplier of revenues.

I do not personally like rent controls. However, at a time when interest rates and the discontinuance of the federal rental housing subsidy program have resulted in unaffordable rents of $600 to $800 per month being required for new construction, coupled with near record levels of interprovincial immigration, it is a gross oversimplification to attribute the rental housing shortage to just rent controls. If this was so, why is there so little construction of rental units in the United States where there are few controls, and why is the Alberta government putting over half a billion dollars of public funds into rental housing production subsidies simultaneously with removing rent controls? Unfortunately, if rent controls were removed today without any housing programs in place, rents would incease by 20-25 percent, and little else would happen.

It is a complex topic, on which there is no 'solution' that will satisfy everyone. I would be pleased to provide any further comments upon request. — Jim Patterson, Rentalsman, Province of B.C.

Signs on buses

Since we will soon be getting some new buses, I should like to make a suggestion. I think each bus should have its number in big letters on the top of the bus.

I know at present they have a sign stating where they are going, but think of the number of people who have poor eyesight and have to get very close before they can read it; they have to go and look at the back of the bus to find the number. A number on the front end would save a lot of confusion because you would be able to see it quite a distance. Stand outside Woolworth's on Douglas when four or five buses come in at once and you will see what I mean. — Henry Copeland, 535 Niagara Street.

Old-fashioned

My legislative office has received a tremendous volume of mail concerning Bill 8, the Holiday Shopping Act. A number of those letters have no return address.

Therefore, I hope you will permit me to reply generally to those above through your letters column.

I oppose Bill 8. It's my own conviction that material gain obsesses us quite enough six days a week. I don't see the point of adding the burden of a seventh.

Mr. Bennett's government does not seem sensitive to the human values at stake here. No doubt Bill 8's supporters will argue that "there are profits to be made on Sundays." So be it. That's not the principal issue.

Bill 8 allows the seven municipalities of Greater Victoria each to set their own Sunday rules. The inevitable consequence of this scheme will be a crazy-quilt of conflicting bylaws. The end result of that chaos will be wide-open Sunday shopping. This is the principal issue. Inevitably, there will be a widening of business on Sundays.

My own view is pretty old-fashioned, I suppose. I like the idea of at least one day's rest, contemplation, and quiet for a whole community. On that basis, I will oppose the Holiday Shopping Act. — Charles Barber, MLA, Victoria.

Missed the bus

Day by day the Capitol Theatre is being reduced to a pile of rubble, at the very same time, in the neighboring republic, similar cinema palaces are being restored. Once again Victoria has missed the bus. The Capitol could have been retained as the jewel in a new complex, but the fact that there is money in heritage is still lost to many corporate boardrooms. A potential tourist attraction is gone, and all that will be gained is more sterile boxes. — Michael F.H. Halleran, Honorary Secretary, The Hallmark Society.

Carnation Day

May we take this opportunity to convey our thanks to the news media for your recent support of our fifth annual Carnation Day campaign to raise funds for Multiple Sclerosis research.

Our thanks to Constable Greg Crouch of the Saanich Police for co-ordinating our campaign and the many members of the municipal police forces. Assisting Constable Crouch were Constable Derek Chow, Victoria; Constable Bob Jones, Oak Bay; and Constable Russell Baker, Esquimalt. It was indeed gratifying to see the excellent co-operation that the police received from those volunteering to canvass and those who contributed to our campaign.

It is only through the combined efforts of many people and the overwhelming generosity of our communities that $31,000 was collected from the lower Island area making a grand total of over $35,000 on the Island. These funds will go to research into the cause and cure of Multiple Sclerosis, a disease of the central nervous system affecting some 35,000 Canadians. — Maureen J. Ahearn, Acting Executive Director, Victoria and Vancouver Island Multiple Sclerosis Society, 5-3318 Oak Street.

U.S. reneges on treaties

By GEOFFREY STEVENS
The Globe and Mail

OTTAWA — External Affairs Minister Mark MacGuigan has created a bit of a flap with his recent television interview in which he criticized United States foreign policy.

It's too bad, though, that the interview did not continue for a few more minutes because Mr. MacGuigan was ready to blister the Americans. The Trudeau government's impatience has given way to extreme annoyance at Washington's continuing failure to ratify two Canada-U.S. maritime agreements which were negotiated a year ago January and formally signed on March 29, 1979. Both dealt with the East Coast. One agreement was to refer the stubborn maritime boundary dispute to the International Court of Justice for arbitration. The other was to govern fishing rights and management.

Together, the two agreements represented a peaceful solution to the Canada-U.S. Fish War which had begun in June, 1978, when fishermen from each country were barred from the waters of the other. In fact, however, the Fish War lingers on.

The problem starts with the fact that what are agreements in Canadian terms are, in U.S. terms, international treaties. International treaties must be ratified by the U.S. Senate. The treaties, however, are so strongly opposed by northeastern fishing interests that they have hired a professional lobbyist, Leigh Ratiner, a former member of the U.S, Law of the Sea delegation, to stall and defeat the treaties. Ratiner has had amazing success, thanks to two powerful allies on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Senator Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts and Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island.

Most of the other 14 senators on the committee aren't sufficiently interested in the subject to buck the wishes of their two colleagues from the affected region. On April 15 and 17 — more than a year after the agreements had been signed — the committee finally held preliminary hearings. No action was taken and no further hearings are scheduled before Congress adjourns for the summer; come fall, it's election time.

The only way the impasse might be broken would be with pressure from the White House — pressure which President Jimmy Carter shows no sign of applying with a nominating convention and an election in the offing.

To Canadian politicians and officials, this is both a demonstration of bad faith — because the Carter Administration made agreements it was not prepared to promote in Congress — and a reflection of the president's ineptitude in dealing with Congress.

For Canada, the big issue is scallops. Under the Canada-U.S. deal, American fishermen would be entitled to 26 per cent of the scallop catch on the Georges Bank — their traditional level. In the past year, however, the United States has nearly doubled its scallop fleet and has pushed its proportion of the catch to 40 per cent, possibly jeopardizing stocks.

What to do? The government is proposing to send an ad hoc group of parliamentarians to Washington to lobby for ratification. Consideration is being given to "linkages" — to squeezing the United States on other issues to get action on the fishing agreements.

The most likely action, however, will be to authorize increased Canadian fishing for scallops, even at the risk of depleting stocks more seriously. The danger is that the U.S. would carry out an earlier threat to arrest Canadian fishing boats in an area of 2,740 square nautical miles on the Georges Bank where Washington categorically rejects Canada's claim to ownership. And then what?

MACGUIGAN . . . fish dispute

'Little Leagues mock great game'

By BILL STEIGERWALD
The Los Angeles Times

It was a typical Saturday afternoon at the ball field. Each foul line held back a row of attentive mothers and fathers in lawn chairs. All around them, happy children were having fun. They did "wheelies" on their bikes, wrestled and chased one another, climbed trees, gorged themselves on junk food and sometimes, in their youthful exuberance, spilled out on to the playing field.

On the field were 10 little "minor league" Mustangs in yellow T-shirts and matching caps. Mr. Jones, the coach of the Braves, was pitching. Two 13-year-old umpires, still wearing their "major league" Yankee uniforms, were stationed behind first and second bases. Another adult, the Mustangs' defensive coach, patrolled the outfield grass, barking instructions to his fielders whenever the ball came toward them.

At bat was Suzi Smith, a 44-inch third-grader and third-baseperson for the Braves. She waited patiently for the pitch, her silvery aluminum bat cocked perfectly.

Mr. Jones lobbed the slowest overhand pitch that the laws of God and Newton would allow. The official Little League baseball struck Suzi on the shoulder, and she crumpled in the dust of the batter's box.

Coaches and parents rushed to home plate. As they escorted Suzi to the bench, she cried as if her arm as well as her pride were broken. But she recovered quickly and, following the scattered applause of several adults, quickly grounded out to first.

The game progressed. The Mustangs and the Braves swung regulation Little League bats at regulation Little League balls. They were protected by batting helmets and catcher's gear. They raced down freshly limed and measured basepaths in size 3 spikes.

They carried Flexomatic-palm mitts ($80 Tom Seaver autograph model), and wore numbered uniforms and used detailed scorebooks and had impartial umpires. Everything was organized and properly supervised, and everybody got to play at least three innings or take at least one turn at bat.

It looked like a game of baseball, but it was a mockery of America's greatest pastime.

Though adults carefully floated the pitches and no balls or strikes were called, at least half the outs came from strikeouts. Not one fly ball was caught by any fielder; most ground balls barely travelled 30 feet. There were two clean hits and three successful infield putouts per team in 7 innings of errors, bonehead plays, bellowing coaches, screaming parents, collisions and wild throws.

It was not much fun. Suzi was only one of several kids to shed tears after being conked by a hardball that most of the players treated as if it were radioactive. Other 8-, 9- and 10-year-olds had their feelings hurt, their judgments ridiculed or their bad plays greeted by cheers from coaches and parents of the opposing team.

The game, typical of thousands played across America every Saturday of spring and early summer, was full of examples of why organized baseball for youth has attracted so much criticism since its inception in Williamsport, Pa., in 1939.

Little League, in all its variations, is now as sacred to America as manicured lawns, women's clubs and matched socks. It's everywhere, but it's not monolithic. Every township has its special rules and by-laws. There are player drafts and no-parent rules, and rules about contracts and eligibility, and mandatory two-day-rest rules for starting pitchers.

But the rules merely institutionalize what's wrong: organization.

For some reason, adult America has deemed it important, almost obligtory, that its youth — now girls as well as boys — experience the joys of organized baseball. Not just baseball, organized baseball — baseball as imitative of the Big Leagues as possible, down to opening with the National Anthem; baseball to be experienced as soon as the kid can stand up straight. Balls are even set up on tees for 6-year-olds who can't hit pitches.

In the blind stampede toward organization, something has been forgotten: All the rules and supervision in the world won't change the fact that kids under 13 are too young to handle a hardball — not to mention the damage to their psyches brought about by trying to play a demanding, complicated game in front of their parents and peers.

The best conceivable baseball program, if there must be one, would be to employ a sincere, dedicated adult to drop off a set of bases, a couple of balls and a bat or two at each local field in the morning — then disappear until it's time to collect them at dusk. This may sound like anarchy in Los Angeles; we called it fun in Pittsburgh not too long ago.

STRAY FEATHERS

Harold Hosford

"A small bird, yellowish and cinerous, of the grosbec species, appeared this day in the neighborhhod of one of the sugar-camps on the river below, and was shot with an arrow by an Indian boy, who brought it to me. The Chippewas call it Pashcundamo, an allusion to the stoutness of its bill, and consequent capacity for breaking surfaces."

Those are the words of a chap named Schoolcraft. He wrote them more than 157 years ago about a bird seen in the East, and they seem to be among the very first ever written about a bird that — if not breaking surfaces — is breaking records around Victoria today. That bird — the Pashcundamo of the Chippewas — is the Evening Grosbeak.

Evening Grosbeaks are not easy birds to overlook. Their yellows, browns, and whites — in the males, at least — make them one of our most striking birds. But, despite those showy colors, Evening Grosbeaks are more often heard than seen. And, these days, in Victoria, Evening Grosbeaks are being heard — and even sometimes, seen — all over the place.

Things have been like this since early in the year when, as in most years, the odd grosbeak could be heard as it called from the tip of a tall tree or passed overhead. But, today, it's hard to go anywhere there are trees in Victoria without hearing them.

Mind you, hearing Evening Grosbeaks can give a distorted idea of their numbers. Two of them, cheering and chattering in a cacophonous concerto, can sound like a dozen. But even if we divided all the noise of grosbeaks we've been hearing lately by six, that would still leave a lot of grosbeaks.

Evening Grosbeaks were first considered to be birds only of the mountain forests of western North America. When settlement of the east began, they were rare in that part of the continent. But about 1890 one of those unexplained phenomena that make an interest in wild birds the joy that it is, occured. — the Evening Grosbeak suddenly broke out of its western redoubt and sent reconnaissance patrols racing to the Atlantic seaboard.

They apparently liked what they found, because since then they have gradually become firmly established in the East and are among the most common birds of the forests of the northeast — particularly New Brunswick.

While their reason for moving east in the first place may remain a mystery, why they stayed does not seem to be so. Most authorities credit a scrawny, unkempt tree — almost a weed in many eyes — the box elder, or Manitoba Maple, with turning the trick.

The box elder was one of the most popular trees among the early settlers. They were hardy, easily propagated and grew rapidly, all of which endeared them to a people who — after clearing the forest — were looking for a quick replacement around their farms.

Where the box elder and the Evening Grosbeaks meet is at the dinner table. Box elders are prolific seed producers — and Evening Grosbeaks found in those seeds most of what they needed to tide them through the hard eastern winters.

Here in the West, Evening Grosbeaks are more birds of the coniferous forests. Most of the known nests are in such trees, usually high up. But, again in the East, trees like ashes, elms, and, of course, box elders are popular.

What has caused the sudden appearance of Evening Grosbeaks in such numbers here this year is a bit of a mystery. They've been reported making heavy inroads into the loopers that have been such spring pests lately. But the reason may not be here, it may be where they came from, because Evening Grosbeaks, like a lot of their brethren in the finch family, seem to be great wanderers and their wanderings relate to food. When food gives out in one place, they move on in search of greener pastures: We may be seeing part of one of these movements.

Katharine Whitehorn

LONDON — Eat, drink, and be merry for tomorrow we diet, runs the old saying; the best moment for enjoying food, I've always felt, is when you have just decided to diet. So, as a last fling, you may as well have some potatoes, with butter, and lots of mayonnaise, and thick cream with your strawberries.

Diets — I've tried them all. There was one from a French magazine where you ate all vegetables one day, all meat the next, all fruit the third; it also cut down on liquids, which was a crafty way of making sure you lost several spectacular pounds the first few days.

There was the grapefruit diet, which as far as I was concerned merely added a grapefruit to what I normally ate. The drinking man's diet was great fun; it was basically a low carbohydrate diet, with lots of fat and protein.

There were only two things wrong with it: the first was that the drinks, which you were allowed, had of course their usual effect of deadening the higher nerve centres of the brain, so one was apt to forget about the rest of the diet altogether. And when you did remember, it was so fat-laden that you ended up with liverish spots before your eyes.

I tried it after Christmas one year; I had written in my diary, as I always do, name, address, next of kin and, should they want my spare parts in case of accident, "Okay to take kidneys, etc.!" On the morning after New Year's Eve I was adding shakily the words "Liver not recommended."

Then there are diets I have made up for myself — those sometimes work, because they are at least tailored to what I know I can do, like leaving out meals, and what I know I can't, like leaving out the drink.

No one really needs both lunch and breakfast, though I'm profoundly convinced it's bad for you to cut out both. So if I am to lunch, then breakfast is a cup of coffee. And allowing myself a gin and low-calories tonic in the evening at least gives me something to look forward to.

There was a good diet I thought out in which you simply eat all the things that are most trouble: prawns, which have to be laboriously taken out of their shells; French artichokes, which have to be taken to pieces leaf by leaf; cherry pie with the stones in; small, awful, bony little birds, herrings, spiny fish . . . the idea was you would get so bored with it all you would stop, and so I did . . . . but not stop eating, just stop fighting on through all those shells and whiskers.

* * *

In Britain, Slimming magazine, which runs a chain of clubs, has long recognized that different people slim in different ways. For the clubs, they do think we all need a tough-eyed woman to make us feel rotten if we haven't lost any weight, and a glad-eyed group to chorus "Well done, Katie!" if we have. But they'll dish out diet sheets for feast-and-fast diets, drinkers' diets for those locked in the kitchen with small children.

And they do, too, have some sensible suggestions for cutting down the calorie value of what you're cooking. For example, if you're making spaghetti sauce, you can knock 400 calories off each helping by browning the mince in its own fat in a non-stick pan and then adding the onions, rather than frying the onions first in extra fat.

Why do we do it? Surely we don't all go straight from puppy fat to middle-age spread without ever being the right size? Yet three-quarters of housewives in Britain are trying to diet at any one time — and that's statistics. And we keep trying new ones in the hope they might be just slightly less boring than the one we failed to lose weight on last time.

What's depressing about the whole scene, though, is the way the experts will keep changing their minds. When I first started cutting down, stodge was out and fats were in; didn't matter how much fat you took on board, they said then, it helped keep you from getting hungry, and burned up all the other things you ate.

Now I note with evil glee that an expert, looking at a family's food intake for health reasons, tut-tutted that there was not enough stodge: why do they not eat more bread and potatoes? said he. Sugar, of course, is still Bad not Good — but I bet they'll change their minds about that too before the '80s are over.

I am even hoping they will come round to my favorite diet, and I will actually be able to get slim by eating potatoes and just about nothing else. After all, half the Irish lived for two generations on nothing but spuds and buttermilk, so it obviously can be done.

I'd have no difficulty sticking to that diet, I'm sure, since for me the chefs of the world slave in vain to come up with anything as absolutely glorious, irresistible, tempting, and delicious as a few cold boiled potatoes eaten out of the larder last thing at night. In fact I think I will just pop down to the kitchen now. I know there were three left over from supper.

Renault may buy parts here

Four Renault vice-presidents from France and the purchasing director of Renault USA will meet Canadian auto parts manufacturers in Toronto on June 4 and 5 to discuss buying parts here.

Renault wants to buy parts for its Renault 5 and 18 models, now sold in Canada, and parts to supply a planned assembly plant in Kenosha, Wis.

New York

Before the opening the U.S. government reported that producer prices of finished goods rose by a seasonally adjusted 0.3 per cent in May — the smallest increase they have shown in more than 2½ years.

The impact of that hopeful sign on the inflation outlook seemed to offset at first by news that the unemployment rate jumped to 7.8 per cent in the same month from seven per cent in April.

That marked the second sharp increase in a row in the jobless rate, and provided strong new evidence that the recession was taking hold rapidly.

But after a hesitant start, stock prices moved steadily higher.

Gulf and Western led the active list, up ⅝ to $18⅝. On Thursday the company demonstrated a new battery and motor system for use in electric cars and storage of power by utilities.

London

The Financial Times Index of 30 industrials closed at 428.5, up 5.1.

Industrials and golds advanced.

Canadian stocks were mixed.

Kimberley, B.C.
1972 - an amazing transformation happened in Kimberley, making it one of the most charming little towns in the country. The entire community banded together and transformed this typical mining community into "The Bavarian City of the Rockies." In only 8 months over 80% of the business section was converted to the authentic Bavarian styling. The downtown platzl (mall) features a block long bubbling brook, alpine huts, high country trees and during the summer months, a wandering minstrel. Happy Hans, official symbol will, with stein mug raised and arms outstretched, bid "Wilkommen Zee Kimberley" to all visitors.

WE ARE THERE TOO.

Bonds

TORONTO (CP) — Prices advanced in active trading on the Canadian bond market Thursday.

The short end of the market was up 20 cents. Mid-, long-term, provincial and corporate issues rose one-half of a point.

Day-to-day money was available at 17 per cent. Three-month treasury bills traded at an average of 11.56 per cent, down from 11.58 last week, and six-month bills at 10.75 per cent, down from 10.87 per cent. A special one-year bill was traded at 10.68 per cent.

Institutional accounts have taken to the sidelines for the moment, awaiting further economic statistics, an analyst at Merrill Lynch, Royal Securities said. In the money markets, the upward trend in short rates appears to have stalled or even come to an end. He added that signs od a slightly easier stance are beginning to show after a period of extreme tightness by the Bank of Canada.

Mortgage money market shrinking

EDMONTON (CP) — Less mortgage money is being loaned this year than during each of the last three years, says a spokesman for the Mortgage Insurance Co. of Canada.

The mortgage market will shrink to an anticipated level of less than $15 billion in 1980 from between $16 and $17 billion in the years 1977 to 1979, Claude Renaud, director of business development, said in an interview.

Renaud said mortgage lenders are curtailing their targets because of difficulties in maintaining margins and in matching funds.

"In simple terms, it means four mortgage loans when five used to be made."

He said few people, if any, have benefitted from high mortgage rates. Those hardest hit were borrowers who had to renew a mortgage.

Those considering a new loan postponed a decision, which was reflected in the volume borrowed on mortgages in April, estimated at half of what it was for the same month during the last three years.

Renaud said a few builders had commitments of lower interest rates from their leaders before the increases. But even these suffered from a market slowed by uncertainty.

Other builders had to change their marketing strategy and started selling mortgage plans, which often included second mortgages. Others were forced out of business.

In Ontario, 1,500 companies have closed for a variety of reasons in the last few years.

Renaud said the real culprit has been government, with record-high borrowing this year. When government draws more funds from the marketplace, it displaces borrowing by long-term borrowers.

He said prospective home-buyers had fears about the future of their investment and decided to wait. The volume of loans insured by the three Canadian mortgage insurers was down about 33 per cent in the first three months of this year compared with the same period in the last three years.

Renaud said investors went for short-term money. Five-year term deposits were so rare in April that major lenders stopped making five-year term loans. Whether investors will ever go back to putting a high proportion of their savings into long-term investments is questionable.

"My guess is that they will not."

He said borrowers had to go the same way. Last year five per cent of all mortgages were for a one-year term, with 75 per cent for a five-year term. This year it is estimated that 50 per cent of all mortgages are for a one-year term and possibly as few as 20 per cent for a five-year term.

"This reduces the stability of our system. Even long-term projects would have to be financed with short-term money."

Renaud said many financial institutions which rely primarily on mortgages reported a drop in earnings in the last six months.

He said the damage done to the industry will not be easily repaired.

There will be less readily available funds in future and lenders will be more cautious when looking at new projects.

"The days when buoyant markets can compensate for ill-conceived planning or poor financial structuring are over."

Prime rate in U.S. chopped to 13%

NEW YORK (AP) — Three major U.S. banks announced reductions in their prime lending rates Thursday to 13 from 14 per cent.

Bankers Trust Co. of New York, and Security Pacific National Bank of Los Angeles posted the new rates Thursday. Late in the day, First National Bank of Chicago announced it would take one percentage point off its prime, beginning today.

Analysts said they expected other major banks to match the decrease soon.

The prime lending rate has fallen to 13 from 20 per cent in the last seven weeks and analysts say it is likely to drop more before levelling off later this year.

Chase Manhattan Bank, the third largest in the United States, led the latest rate reduction, trimming its prime to 13 per cent Wednesday.

Other banks that have matched the move include Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. of New York; Marine Midland Bank of Buffalo, N.Y.; and several regional banks throughout the country. One small bank based in Miami reduced its rate to 12½ from 13½ per cent.

The prime is the interest rate banks charge on short-term loans to their best-risk corporate borrowers, while loans to most other businesses are set one or more percentage points above the prime.

The prime does not apply to consumer loans but is considered a key barometer of trends in all kinds of interest rates. When the prime changes, other rates — including home mortgage rates — usually follow in the same direction.

Since the prime peaked at 20 per cent in early April, banks have been lowering their rates as businesses cut down on borrowing.

Sun also rises in Calgary

CALGARY (CP) — Another Sun will rise in Alberta on Aug. 1 when the Calgary Albertan becomes the Calgary Sun.

Douglas Creighton, publisher of the Toronto Sun, announced at a news conference Thursday that the financially ailing morning tabloid had been bought from Thomson Newspapers Ltd.

Creighton said the new paper will adopt the same successful formula as the flashy, sexy, irreverent Toronto and Edmonton Suns.

The Albertan, born a broadsheet in 1902 and made a tabloid in 1977, will move into a new building under its new owner. Creighton said The Sun intends to buy land, build a new building and buy a press — all for about $10 million.

The purchase was described as a straight cash transaction. Thomson and Creighton agreed not to disclose the amount.

"A morning paper is where our strength has been and that's where we intend to stay," said Creighton.

The Toronto publisher said The Albertan has been losing money, but "we feel that by putting that (Toronto) formula into effect here, we can turn the thing around."

Creighton said Toronto Sun Publishing will lease the Albertan building and presses for 18 months with an option to renew for another six months.

He said the package includes acquistion of The Albertan and its weekly associates, the North and South Side Mirrors, but does not include the paper's land, building and presses.

He said daily circulation of Toronto Sun, now in its ninth year, is 223,000, while Edmonton Sun, which began publishing in 1978, has a weekday circulation of 55,000.

John Reistrup, editor-in-chief of The Albertan, said the paper's circulation is 50,000 Monday to Friday and 58,500 on Sundays.

Creighton said acting Albertan publisher Don Doram, on loan from the Lethbridge Herald, will be replaced. But no decisions have been made on senior management positions.

Both The Albertan and the Lethbridge Herald were owned by FP Publications Ltd. until the FP group was bought by Thomson earlier this year.

Fish boat licence transfers curbed

OTTAWA (CP) — The first step in a massive overhaul of West Coast commercial fishboat licencing was announced Thursday by Romeo LeBlanc, federal minister of fisheries and oceans.

Moratoriums were slapped on transfer and replacement privileges of three types of fishing licences in what LeBlanc described as an interim measure to protect fish stocks from overfishing and excessive capitalization of the fishing fleet.

LeBlanc said in a news release prepared in Ottawa but released in Vancouver that a licensing policy based on a report by Dr. Sol Sinclair, professor of agriculture economics at the University of Manitoba, is pending although he wouldn't say when it would be implemented.

The moratoriums, effective immediately, call for:

— An end to the practice of transferring licences from two or more small vessels to one larger boat. Applications for transfer of licences between boats of the same size will continue to be approved.

— A ban that will prevent vessels licensed in the herring roe gillnet fishery from fishing for groundfish and shellfish. Herring roe gillnetters which landed $500 or more of groundfish or shellfish in 1978 or 1979 will be exempt from the ban.

— A moratorium on the transfer of salmon licence privileges from Indian-owned vessels to non-Indian vessels. LeBlanc said this measure is necessary to stop the decline of Indian participation in the fishery.

"It will stay in effect until more satisfactory long-term policies can be developed in consultation with native Indian organizations," he said.

Sinclair, who drafted the present licencing program in 1968, was asked to re-examine the program in July, 1977, shortly after the introduction of the 200-mile offshore fishing limit and a West Coast salmonid enhancement program.

The 1968 program has been criticized by fishermen who say it concentrates fishing capacity among those who could afford expensive new boats and equipment.

In Vancouver, Bill Procopation, business agent for United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, said that while LeBlanc is on the right track, the new measures are band-aid solutions. Procopation said the entire licensing system must be changed.

"What he should be looking at is an overhaul of the complete system to make it more equitable for the people trying to make a living at the resource."

Three seek Sidney seat

Saturday is election day in Sidney.

Three candidates are seeking the aldermanic seat vacated earlier this year by Daryl Ashby.

They are teacher Ernest Stanley Bamford, 52, medical representative William Lloyd Burdon, 28, and businessman Michael Lane, 31.

Voting will take place at Sidney town hall from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Ashby, who resigned after serving less than one year of his first term, stepped down because he took a senior engineering position with neighboring North Saanich municipality.

Dish problems snowing McGeer

The satellite television demonstration set up at the legislature has turned into a dishful of problems for Science and Communications Minister Pat McGeer.

—And federal Communications Minister Francis Fox is on McGeer's back for over-stepping the terms of his licence.

While claiming the legal question isn't the most important one, Fox said he is seeking legal opinions on McGeer's actions.

Fox said, however, he is trying to avoid a major federal-provincial confrontation on the subject.

As a result of Barrett's protest, McGeer temporarily cut off all satellite TV reception Thursday and switched the sets in the legislature back to normal cablevision service.

However by today, or — depending on availability of equipment — early next week, viewers at the legislature will be able to choose between normal cablevision or satellite television.

In the process, McGeer said, he hopes the quality of reception will be improved.

That would take care of two problems. The third may be more difficult to handle.

Fox told the House of Commons Thursday that McGeer gave him his word to use the double-dish antenna system exclusively to receive Canadian signals from the Anik satellites.

"It is disturbing that a provincial minister would not live up to his word," Fox said.

But McGeer denied ever promising not to receive U.S. satellite signals.

"I never even discussed it with Mr. Fox or with his officials," he said.

McGeer indicated he intends to continue receiving U.S. signals in the demonstration project which began Tuesday and is scheduled to run for a month.

He repeated his argument that he really does not need a licence to operate the big dish and only applied for it as a courtesy.

Federal officials are misinterpreting the Radio Act, McGeer said. As long as he is not rebroadcasting the satellite signals commercially, he does not require a licence.

If Parliament doesn't want these antennas to be used by Canadians, it should pass a separate act making them clearly illegal, McGeer said.

"Then there would be no question about it, and while we might disagree with the law, we would all obey it."

McGeer points out there are scores of unlicensed, non-commercial satellite TV antennas being used in remote communities across Canada — a use which Fox recently said he condones.

He said there is no legal difference between those operations and the one at the legislature.

Without coming right out and saying so, McGeer made it clear he intends to continue his experiment despite the static from Ottawa.

"I have received no instructions from the federal government that they wish us to dismantle our apparatus," he said.

If such instructions are issued, McGeer said he would consult with all MLAs, with the cabinet and with all federal MPs from B.C. before deciding on any action.

Deputy Speaker Walter Davidson says federal officials would be barred from physically dismantling McGeer's two-dish operation on the back lawn of the legislature because the lawn is part of the parliamentary precinct.

Barrett, meanwhile, objected to McGeer's flouting of federal regulations although he said he agrees the antennas should be legal.

Barrett Japan trip: no strings attached

Financing for his two-week trip to Japan isn't connected with Japanese companies, NDP leader Dave Barrett said Thursday.

BARRETT
. . . Canadian sources

Barrett, who revealed details of the trip to start June 14, said the one condition placed on James Rhodes, a long-time friend and former head of B.C. Hydro who is picking up the tab and plane expenses, is that the money must be from Canadian sources with no obligations.

"I have made it very clear to Mr. Rhodes that if expenses are to be picked up, that I want to be assured that there is no commitment on the picking up of the expenses on any basis, on business deals, commitments or contacts whatsover."

Barrett will be accompanied by his wife, Rhodes and his wife, Dave Stupich (NDP — Nanaimo) and John Southworth, a consultant with contacts in the Japanese business world.

Southworth, in consultation with the Canadian Embassy, worked out details of the trip, which include an address to the Canada-Japan Society and discussions with several Japanese business leaders.

"I want to be brought up to date in terms of the current situation in the Japanese economy, the impact obviously of an unstable energy supply and what kind of replacement load they're going to place on coal over the next 15 to 30 years," Barrett said.

"I'll also be meeting with their trade union leadership which is beginning to emerge in more of a classic North American pattern."

Barrett, who will be in Japan at the same time as B.C. coal company executives trying to close a deal on coal sales to Japanese steel industry interests, said he will not take part in discussions on development of northeast B.C. coalfields.

CRTC hearing urged on operator phase-out

The B.C. Telephone Co. should be forced to go before the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission to explain its decision to eliminate operator services in some B.C. communities, Bob Skelly (NDP — Alberni) said Thursday.

Skelly, who presented two petitions to the legislature containing more than 5,000 names from Vernon and Dawson Creek residents, said automation of services will cause a great loss of employment and income in the affected communities with no improvement in service.

"The impact on the community is going to be something like the withdrawl of $3.9 million in disposable income that will be withdrawn from the economy of those communities."

The petitions — calling on the CRTC to hold hearings — were circulated by the Telecommunications Workers Union, which estimates hundreds of jobs will be lost between now and 1983 as a result of the change in Vernon, Dawson Creek, Campbell River, Nanaimo, Nelson and Terrace.

Industry Minister Don Phillips, MLA for Dawson Creek, said he also has asked the CRTC to hold a hearing in that northern community to determine the impact the move will have.

"After all, if the CRTC is going to sit back in Ottawa and make decisions affecting B.C. Telephone they should at least have the courtesy to come out to Dawson Creek and hold a hearing right in the community."

Lay blame on hockey and not voice of truth

Remember the great furore created in the Western Hockey League's round-robin semi-final series? Victoria Cougars, Seattle Breakers and Portland Winter Hawks were the participants, and advance to the final hinged on a Cougar-Breaker confrontation in Seattle.

If Seattle won, first-place finishing Portland was out. It was obvious that second-place Victoria would have preferred facing third-place Seattle in the final, and the great verbal eruption took place after Cougars' Barry Pederson was quoted as saying Victoria might allow victory to escape.

Among the many words written and things said that week was this remark from Portland manager Brian Shaw: "Down here, they do not look lightly on point-shaving and throwing games. It's not like in Canada."

Mr. Falconer resents the inference that Canada is not as law-abiding as the neighbors to the south.

"I resent the implication . . . and I think an explanation or apology is due all Canadians," he writes.

I can not apologize for Shaw, a Canadian, but I can offer an explanation. It is not the first time Canadian hockey teams found themselves in a situation in which defeat would have been more beneficial than victory.

Cougars were given full marks for trying in that game in Seattle, which they lost, but that wasn't the case in the 1977-78 playoffs when Flin Flon Bombers, coached by Mickey Keating, made no attempt to disguise their wishes. A loss to Regina, in Regina, left the Pats, Flin Flon and Brandon Wheat Kings with matching 4-4 won-lost records. Regina and Flin Flon advanced and Brandon, clearly the class of the Eastern Division, was out.

Flin Flon had to lose the final game by a wide margin, since goals determined the advance to the best-of-seven final. The Bombers were obvious in allowing Regina to score the needed goals, and then some, then skated by Brandon's management to wave "good bye."

It happened. Flin Flon went on to capture the divisional crown by defeating Regina in five games.

There were no reprecussions, of a legal kind or from the league or Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

The round-robin format, which created another furore in the Memorial Cup playoffs in Regina last spring, is responsible for opening the door to these lay-down situations. But similar jockeying antics have occured in end-of-season league play. By losing an important game, teams have been able to, in effect, select the preferred opponent in the first round of the playoffs.

I don't think it happens only in Canada, but I do think it is a pity.

Available and on the shelves now is one of the most comprehensive and detailed histories of high school basketball in British Columbia. Ken Wright spent a year and a half putting it together. It covers 35 years, and should be compulsory reading for anyone who had anything to do with the game at the high school level.

No, Bill Garner, I haven't forgotten.

From Roni Arsenault of the Victoria-Esquimalt Minor Hockey Association comes word that Montreal Oldtimers, including Richard brothers Maurice and Henri, have agreed to an exhibition game in Memorial Arena next February.

Details still have to be worked out but opposition, hopefully, will come from an all-star team selected from the district's eight Oldtimers' teams.

Gerulaitis ousts Connors

PARIS (AP) — Vitas Gerulaitis edged Jimmy Connors 6-1, 3-6, 6-7, 6-2, 6-4 today to reach the finals of the French Open tennis championships.

An excited crowd of 18,000 saw a four-hour, nip-and-tuck battle on the centre court of Roland Garros Stadium.

Connors lost his service twice at the start of the final set but came back from 0-3 to 4-5. Then, as Gerulaitis served for the match, Connors escaped from four match points.

Both men had a big incentive to win, because no American has won the men's title here since Tony Trabert in 1955.

Connors did most of the attacking while Gerulaitis had the patience and the accuracy, clipping the lines with cunningly placed shots.

The long match swayed back and forth. In the third set, Connors got an early service break and led 3-1, but Gerulaitis won four games in a row and led 5-3.

Gerulaitis had six set points — two in the ninth game and four in the 10th — but he failed to profit from them. And in the next game he served one of the few double faults in the match and dropped his service. He broke back to 6-6 but Connors won the tiebreaker by seven points to three.

Gerulaitis won the fourth set comfortably to level at two sets all, but he had to fight for almost every point in the exciting final set. The French fans were so roused the umpire repeatedly had to call for silence.

Connors said after the match he always felt he was in with a chance of winning — right down to the last point.

"Maybe he was getting nervous when he served at 40-0 in the final game, with three match points," Connors said. "But I played the fourth set like a bum."

In the fourth set Gerulaitis broke Connors' service twice and led 4-1.

Thursday, Chris Evert Lloyd defeated Hana Mandlikova of Czwchoslavakia after dropping the first set 7-6.

Lloyd, 25, displaying her usual cool, put herself through the same mental jolting she had used earlier in this two-week tournament to quell another young upstart, 16-year-old Bettina Bunge.

Lloyd got angry at herself, decided to play her own game, and hit out strong. She finally took the match 6-7, 6-2, 6-2, but it was difficult.

"When I was No. 1 in the world, I won most of my matches from confidence alone," Lloyd said afterwards. "I'm not so confident now because I'm no longer dominating tennis."

Riding a clay court winning streak of nearly 40 matches and looking for a fourth French title, Lloyd will face Virginia Ruzici of Romania on Saturday for the $42,500 title.

Ruzici, who won the French Open in 1978 when Lloyd didn't play, defeated Dianne Fromholtz of Australia 7-6, 6-1. Fromholtz, who upset Billie Jean King in the quarter-finals, held Ruzici to a close first set but lost control in the second.

Red-hot rivalry on tap in Belmont

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Kentucky Derby winner Genuine Risk and Preakness victor Codex renew their rivalry Saturday in the $288,700 Belmont Stakes, the final race in the Triple Crown for three-year-olds.

The 1½ event has all the ingredients for an exciting contest.

The field of 10 includes the first two finishers in the Derby, Genuine Risk and Rumbo, and the Preakness, Codex and Genuine Risk, and the Derby's beaten favorite, Rockhill Native.

In addition to the filly-colt aspect of the showdown between Genuine Risk and Codex, there is an ongoing feud between their jockeys that resulted from a controversial incident in the Preakness.

Add to that an unknown factor of the undefeated colt Pikotazo from Mexico, who has won all nine of his races.

Genuine Risk became the first filly in 65 years — and only the second ever — to win the Derby. Two weeks later in the Preakness at Pimlico, Codex beat Genuine Risk by 4¾ lengths after surviving a foul claim by the filly's jockey, Jacinto Vasquez.

Vasquez accused Angel Cordero, aboard Codex, of deliberately taking his horse wide entering the stretch and making Genuine Risk go outside as she was making a big move from behind. He said Codex had bumped his filly and that Cordero's whip hit his filly's nose.

After reviewing the films of the race for 10 minutes, the stewards allowed the result to stand. They ruled that any interference by Codex was not serious enough to warrant a disqualification.

Two days later, Diana Firestone, owner of Genuine Risk, appealed the stewards' decision to the Maryland Racing Commission. After a three-day hearing this week, the Commission members voted 3-1 to uphold the stewards.

The Commission's decision infuriated Vasquez, who threatened retaliation in the Belmont.

"If Angel Cordero pulls the same kind of stunt in the Belmont that he pulled in the Preakness," Vasquez said. "I won't leave it up to the stewards to make the decision.

"I'll make my own decision, and you will see those two horses come back without riders!"

The race will be telecast at on Channels 2, 6 and 7, starting at 2 p.m.

Hudon's third win leads big triactor

The triactor paid $836.30 — the third highest of the meet.

All three large triactor payouts in the young season have combined the numbers eight, three and one.

On Thursday the finish was 8-3-1 and the two previous triactors combined the figures at 8-1-3.

Joe Hudon drove Shady Hill Vicki to his third win of the night and pushed his 11-day meet record to 15 victories.

For the avid, stay-awake fans, Channel 7 carries WCT tennis play at 12:50 a.m.

Express connects

By The Canadian Press

Detroit Express finally got together on the road and it paid off with a 2-1 win over Toronto Blizzard in a North American Soccer League game Thursday.

In other games, Houston Hurrican shaded Tampa Bay Rowdies 3-2 and Tulsa Roughnecks nipped Fort Lauderdale Strikers 2-1.

Bannister, 19, replaced starter Donato Arndillio at 65:11. He broke a 1-1 deadlock when he beat goalkeeper Tony Chursky for his second goal of the season in the 81st minute.

Midgets are back for Western event

For the first time in more than five years, midget racing returns to Western Speedway Saturday night.

According to the experts, open wheel super midgets are the thoroughbred all-American race car. They have a wheelbase of only 68 to 72 inches and highly modified racing engines generating 200 to 250 horse power in a car weighing from 800 to 1,300 pounds.

Drivers — and many famous Indianapolis names began their careers in midgets — need a lot of skill and very fast reflexes.

A field of 25 is expected for Saturday's program which starts with time trials at 7 p.m.

Tacoma's Gary Lynch is the current points leader in the Washington Midgets Racing Association (WMRA) while Dennis Kitts and Gene Large of Puyalup are second and third. The top Canadian driver is Palmer Crowell of Vancouver, who is in fourth spot.

A different sort of attraction that accompanies the midget racing is the appearance of a woman starter, Janet Starks. With many years experience behind her flagging and acting as head starter for various forms of open wheel racing, Janet has a colorful way of handling her starting duties.

Babe Ruthers claim awards

Three area teen-agers have won honors in a Babe Ruth baseball skills competition, co-sponsored by Layritz Babe Ruth League and the R.T. French Co.

They are Dennis Lightfoot 13, Gerry Burton 14, and Rick Hunt 15. Runners-up were Gary Dyck 13, Dan Grear 15.

The participants were divided into three age groups and the skills into three categories — fungo hitting, base running and throwing.

Hot Royals crush listless Rangers

By The Associated Press

Dennis Leonard threw a three-hitter and Frank White smashed a three-run home run as Kansas City Royals crushed Texas Rangers 8-0 in American League action Thursday.

It was the second straight three-hitter thrown at the Rangers.

"I don't know if it was me pitching good or them hitting bad, but it was the first time all year I've been able to get every pitch where I wanted it," Leonard said.

Texas manager Pat Corrales, despondent because three of his starting pitchers and third baseman Buddy Bell are sidelined with injuries, said his team looked listless.

"But maybe they looked listless because that guy on the mound (Leonard) didn't help any," Corrales said.

White said the Rangers' problems had nothing to do with the outcome.

"It doesn't matter who we're playing right now," he said. "It's not a matter of having just one or two guys hit well.

The Rangers gave Jim Kern his first start in four years, but Kern gave up White's home run in the third and three other relievers couldn't stem the tide. Kansas City collected 14 hits, including two home runs, a triple and two doubles.

In National League action, Montreal Expos blanked Chicago Cubs 2-0 and New York Mets nipped St. Louis Cardinals 2-1.

Rowland Office hit a two-run, seventh-inning homer and Scott Sanderson pitched a six-hitter as the Expos shut out the Cubs.

Fair-sized chinooks show in some areas

A few spots around Vancouver Island are starting to produce some fair-sized chinook salmon but, in terms of fish per boat, the action can't be described as red-hot.

Poor returns have been the rule at Sooke with only a few chinooks to 26 pounds showing off Secretary Island. Anchovies and minnows have been the preferred bait.

Ray Goulet topped the Pedder Bay catch this week with a 23½ and a 14 pounder taken Tuesday night while drift-fishing with a white Buzz-Bomb near Bentinck Island. Brian Waddell took two weighing 23½ and 7½ in the same region Wednesday while trolling an anchovy.

Chinooks to 15 pounds are showing off Oak Bay on the Flats and Victoria Golf Club links using hootchies, strip and Stingsildas and fairly shallow lines.

* * *

Action has been slow off Sidney. Tom Davis boated the heaviest chinook in recent days with a 17:10-pounder landed Tuesday off Sidney Spit on a Tiny Teaser and some other catches were recorded off James Island.

Saanich Inlet fishing has picked up in recent days with chinooks to 20 pounds turning up in Indian Bay as well as near Henderson Point and the Deep Hole. Top returns were made by trolling strip with 225 feet of wire line and a planer at the crack of dawn or after 7 p.m.

"Good" was the word from Finlayson Arm, where numerous chinooks in the 12 to 14 pound range (including a few to 20 pounds) are showing along with a few coho to four pounds.

Most baits and lures have been working in deep waters.

* * *

Further up-Island, a few chinooks to 20 pounds are grabbing mooched herring off the Bluffs at Cowichan Bay while Active and Porlier passes are yielding a mixed bag of chinooks and blues.

Action has been on the slow side off Nanaimo with the possible exception of a school of blues which showed up about one mile north of the Big Finger on Thursday morning.

Deeply-trolled strip is pulling in a fifty-fifty mixture of chinooks to 10 pounds and coho to three in the mouth of Alberni Inlet. The chinooks have been taken closer to the shore than the coho and the latter species has been landed on lighter gear.

Fishermen at Courtenay are having to travel about six miles offshore to find good blueback fishing.

At Campbell River, fishermen trolling white plugs or strip are landing chinooks to 25 pounds from Deepwater Bay to Francisco Point and blues to 3½ pounds are showing in surface waters around Cortes, Read, Henando and Savary islands.

* * *

Top marks were given the Cowichan River (for browns) as well as Sproat, Great Central, Comox, Echo, Lower Campbell, Mohun, Pye and Stella lakes.

* * *

Women anglers and juniors, aged 16 and under, will be competing in the two-day combined Sweetheart and Junior derbies starting at dawn Saturday in Saanich Inlet.

Juniors will be competing for a bicycle donated by the Victoria Times and women will be vying for a watch.

In addition, there are numerous hidden weight and draw prizes.

Tickets are available at all Saanich Inlet marinas and prize presentations will follow shortly after the closing time of 1 p.m. Sunday at Angler's Anchorage.

* * *

Hunters should note the closing date for submitting applications for the 2,981 limited entry hunting licences in British Columbia is July 3.

The draw will be made July 10.

Application cards and detailed information on dates, seasons, types and number of licences available for each areas should be available at most sporting goods stores and fish and wildlife branch offices.

This year, hunters will have to pay $2 for every application form submitted but there is no additional charge beyond the application fee.

Gretzky wins three awards

By Canadian Press

First-year centre Wayne Gretzky added to his award collection Thursday night when he received the Charlie Conacher Memorial Trophy for his work off the ice.

Earlier in the day, the 19-year-old centre of Edmonton Oilers of the National Hockey League had picked up the Hart Memorial Trophy as the NHL's most valuable player and the Lady Byng Trophy as the league's most gentlemanly player. He is the youngest player ever to win either award and to have won them together.

The Conacher award goes the the NHL player making the outstanding contribution to humanitarian or community service projects.

Gretzky's name will go on the trophy alongside such former NHL greats as Bobby Orr and Jean Beliveau.

He was one of three finalists with Stan Mikita, recently retired from Chicago Black Hawks, and Brad Park of Boston Bruins.

"It's been just an unbelievable day," Gretzky said. "To win the Hart Trophy is really the most special thing that can happen to any hockey player.

"Just look at the list of players who have their names on it.

"The Lady Byng is a great award, too, because the players who have won it are all guys who were able to play clean but effective hockey.

"To me, the Conacher award is special because it's given for something you do as a person, not as a hockey player. The award should really go to the kids, who have so much heart."

Gretzky, considered by many as the best rookie in 1979-80, was ruled ineligible for the Calder Memorial Trophy as rookie-of-the-year after the Oilers joined the NHL from the defunct World Hockey Association.

Ray Bourque of Boston Bruins ended up winning the Calder.

Other award winners were Larry Robinson of Montreal Canadiens, who captured the James Norris Memorial Trophy as the best defenceman, and Montreal left winger Bob Gainey, who took the Frank J. Selke Trophy as the best defensive forward for the third time in as many seasons it has been presented.

Engle out, Frey in SASKATOON (CP) — Saskatoon Blades of the Western Hockey League announced Thursday the appointment of Lorne Frey as coach to replace Jerome Engle, who was fired.

Brothers boost Royal Oak

Al Strandlund made it two in a row Thursday night by hurling a five-hitter to lead Royal Oak Inn to a 3-2 win over Tod-Hackett Construction and out of last place in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League.

Strandlund, who pitched a no-hitter last time out, struck out six batters and walked only one as Royal Oak grabbed the victory and moved two points in front of Tod-Hackett.

Al's brother Terry Strandlund provided all the scoring for the winners with a three-run homer in the fourth inning.

Meanwhile, Marv Carver pitched a four-hitter and Theo Vandenberg homered and singled and drove in three runs as Capital Builders thrashed Ingraham Rodeway Inn 9-0 in the Heywood Park Men's League.

At Macdonald Park, Octavio Madeiros drove in the winning run as Mayfair Insurance shaded Labatts 3-2 and, with Andy McNabb pitching a three-hitter, Saints downed Trafalgar Legion 3-2 in Macdonald Men's League play.

In Victoria-Saanich Women's Softball League play at Hyacinth Park, Pam Jones boosted her unbeaten record to 10-0 as Island Dryco Breakers beat Butler Brothers 3-2, and Bemister's Welding defeated Victoria Athletics 6-2 in the other game.

At Topaz Park, Rawlings defeated Strathcona Hotel 17-5 in a Lower Island Association intermediate "B" women's game.

In a Sidney Men's League game at Sanscha Park, Prairie Inn nipped Fulford Inn, 7-5.

Laser sailors competing for Summer Games trip

Laser sailors with an eye on earning a berth on the B.C. Summer Games team will compete in a five-race series in Esquimalt Harbor this weekend.

The event is being hosted by the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Association, and will draw competitors from Vancouver Island and the Sunshine Coast.

A field of 30 is expected to take part. The rules require that at least three races are completed. Things get under way with a skippers' meeting at 11 a.m. Saturday.

The top eight racers will qualify for the Zone 6 team at the Games, to be held in Kelowna Aug. 15-17.

* * *

The Victoria Thunderbird Fleet — one of the most active sailing organizations around — will hold its fleet championships at the Royal Victoria Yacht Club this weekend. Racing will start at 10 a.m. Saturday and Sunday. It will be a five-race series with one throwout.

While the Thunderbirds are competing at Cadboro Bay, several keel boats of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club will be heading for Bedwell Harbor for the club's annual weekend there.

Still others will go to Roche Harbor where the Friday Harbor Sailing Association will hold a Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet regatta.

There will be a 20-mile race on Saturday, starting at 10 a.m. and a shorter race, six to eight miles, on Sunday. Sunday's race will start at 9 a.m. There will be at least three divisions.

The regatta organizers have arranged to have the U.S. Customs officials available at Roche Harbor until 9 p.m. this evening.

* * *

The Victoria, Oak Bay and Juan de Fuca Power Squadrons are holding a district conference at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel this weekend. The conference is open to all members of the 17 squadrons on Vancouver Island.

Representatives of the U.S. Power Squadrons in Port Angeles and Seattle will also be on hand.

If you're in the Willows Beach area on Sunday around 11 a.m. you'll be able to see the sailpast that ends the conference's official program. The salute will be taken by Chief Commander Oliver Summers in Summer Star.

* * *

Members of the Victoria Canoe and Kayak Club will be at Elk Lake on Saturday for the club's annual Fun Day. A handicap canoe and kayak race over a two-mile course will get things under way. Competitors will start out any time between 10 and 11 a.m. and compete for four prizes — best time, best handicapped time, best time for mixed pair and hidden time.

There will be a paddle-past at 12:30 p.m., to be followed by novelty events. Prizes will be awarded to the team with the most wins.

RVYC will have series racing again at Cadboro Bay this Wednesday. Starting time is 6:30 p.m.

Lack of wind frustrated the sailors this week with Lasers, Catalina 27s and the smaller PHRF boats unable to finish within the time limit.

The first three Cal 20s to cross the finish line were Ken Wilson's Manitou, Frank Cushion's Por Gusto and Tom Hawker's La Galatea. The first three Thunderbirds home were Gary Cooney's Hocus, Dennis Robinson's Coco and Bob Grundison's Owl.

Barry Wright's Trade Wind Tri was the over-all winner in larger PHRF boat competition. She edged Doug Hemphill's Fleetwood and Bruce Kenning's Arkle.

La Galatea won the Cal 20 nationals, raced at Cadboro Bay on the weekend. Three races were sailed on Saturday and one blustery one on Sunday morning. The final race had to be cancelled when the wind died.

Finishing after La Galatea in the 24-boat fleet were Manitou, Ed Life's Semiramis, Ward Palmer's Calindigo, Harry Marshall's Tongariro and John Martin's Merlin.

Daryl Foster's Tzonqua won the Canoe Bay Sailing Club's 30-mile International Boundary Race on Saturday. After her came Holger Brix's Caliente, Gordie Inglis' Byte, Bert Buchanan's Sufi, Russell Searle's Skidbladner, Larry Mofford's Mainbrace, Kevin McCullough's Vagrant, Cleveland Molsberry's Draconian, Don Manness' Whisper and Herb Roberts' Bijou a Moi.

On past performances, Dorothy DeGirolamo operates on the all-or-nothing theory.

The defending champion's record in the Victoria and District women's golf championship, therefore, makes it easy to define the redhead from Gorge Vale as one of the prime favorites in this year's scramble for the CFAX Trophy.

The 58th tournament gets under way Monday with the qualifying round at Cedar Hill. Week-long match play will determine next Friday's finalists.

Six times a winner, DeGirolamo has never been a runner-up in the city test. If she reached the final, she has always won.

Last year's finalist, Diane Phillips also is among the limit entry of 96.

'Bellies click in overtime

NEW WESTMINSTER — A goal by Eric Cowieson at 6:39 of overtime gave New Westminster Salmonbellies a thrilling 10-9 decision over Vancouver Burrards in a Western Lacrosse Association game Thursday night.

As 250 fans watched, the last-place Burrards seemed to have the game won but Mark Tuura scored with 12 seconds remaining to force overtime.

It was the third goal of the game for Tuura while teammate Brian Tasker scored two. Ron Pinder was the top Vancouver scorer with five goals.

Next game: Saturday — Coquitlam at Nanaimo.

Bottlers pour on goals

Shawn Dheensaw and Wayne Christiaens each scored three goals and added two assists Thursday to help the intermediate "A" Goodwill Bottlers down the junior Esquimalt-Victoria Southend Productions 15-6 in an interlocking exhibition lacrosse game at Esquimlat Sports Centre.

Bob Brown also scored three goals, Frank Wendt was two-and-four, Alton Davis finished with two-and-three, Glen Jay went one and five and Bob Wells added a single.

Island boxers stop rivals

VANCOUVER — Middleweight Jerry (Mack Truck) Reddick of Victoria and heavyweight Gord Racette of Nanaimo claimed first-round victories in a professional boxing card Thursday night at PNE Gardens.

Reddick, whose pro record now stands at 8-0, scored a technical knockout over Ron Cichon of Oklahoma. Racette, now 6-0, knocked out Nate Stewart of Seattle.

It's seven come eleven

Lumberworld exploded for seven runs in the seventh inning Thursday night to drop Captial Radiators 11-4 in a Victoria Cosmopolitan Senior Baseball League game at Lambrick Park.

Brian Meadmore ignited the outburst with a two-run homer while Russ Holmes contributed three hits to the Lumberworld cause.

Wayne Proceviat bashed a three-run homer to key a four-run Capital response in the bottom of the seventh.

CHAMPS TURNING PRO

HAMILTON (CP) — John Dowding and Lorna Wighton, three-time Canadian senior ice skating dance champions, are turning professional and joining the Ice Capades.

Hillman sets pace in seniors touney

NANAIMO — Dave Hillman's two-over-par 74 in the second round of the B.C. Seniors golf championship Thursday was enough to put him in the lead with a two-round total of 152.

Doug Bajus and Jack Egger, both of Capilano in Vancouver, share second with 155. Bajus fired a 79 and Egger carded a 76.

The tournament ends tomorrow.

Mick going for third straight city crown

A field of 84, inlcuding the defending and three other former champions, will tee off Saturday at Gorge Vale in the opening round of the City Amateur golf championship.

The 36-hole tournament will wind up Sunday at Uplands.

Defending champion is Dave Mick of Royal Colwood. Other past winners entered include Laurie Kerr and Brian Gandy, also of Colwood, and Gorge Vale's Grant Milliken.

Other top threats include Stu Holroyd, winner of the Island Open this year; Lanny Sawchuck of Uplands, who had been attending University of Nevada at Las Vegas, and a flock of young challengers bidding for their first major title.

Holroyd and Sawchuck are top threats to score a weekend double since the City Intermediate (under 25 years) championship will be determined by the same rounds.

Mick is gunning for his third straight city crown.

Australian leading in Atlanta tourney

ATLANTA (AP) — Australian Bob Shearer, a hypoglycemia victim who eats constantly during a round of golf, needed the lowest score of his professional career Thursday to claim the first round lead in the $300,000 Atlanta Golf tournament.

"That's the lowest round I've had as a pro and the lowest in the United States," Shearer said after touring the hilly 6,945-yard Atlanta Country Club course in a nine-under par 63 to equal the lowest round of the season on the PGA tour.

It gave him a two-shot edge over Bob Murphy, who concluded his round earlier in the sticky 32-degree weather. Shearer was also a distant 15 shots in front of Jack Nicklaus.

Nicklaus was making a rare appearance the week before a major event — the U.S. Open beginning next Thursday. He double-bogeyed three times and had three putts three other times in recording a fat 78, his worst effort this season.

"It hasn't happened very often, but I got down on myself," said Nicklaus who faces an uphill struggle today to survive the halfway cut. "I just didn't play well at all."

Dave Barr of Kelowna shot a 70, seven strokes off the pace. Dan Halldorson of Shilo, Man., had a 71.

Grittner wins school crown

DELTA (CP) — Kerry Grittner of Centennial high in Coquitlam won the B.C. high school boys' golf championship Thursday on the first extra hole after three players completed the 36-hole tournament with 151 totals.

Keith Westover of Vancouver's McGee secondary was second after he and Glen Heuser of Kelowna secondary battled through five extra holes.

Kelowna won the team competition with a 36-hole total of 626. Steveston and Killarney of Vancouver were tied for second place at 642.

Iranians reaffirm decision

TEHRAN (AP) — Iran has reaffirmed its decision not to send a team to the Moscow Summer Olympics.

The official Pars news agency said the decision was made by the ruling revolutionary council at a meeting Sunday. The decision was reached originally in March but some council members recently reopened the issue.

Nancy sharp in backyard

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Nancy Lopez-Melton, playing on a course that surrounds her condominium, one-putted eight times en route to a five-under-par 67 Thursday for the first-round lead in the Ladies Professional Golf Association championship.

Her 28-putt performance, laced with five birdies, gave the two-time LPGA player-of-the-year a two-shot lead in the first major event of this season for women.

"I might know these greens a little better than the others," she said.

She lives with husband, Tim, alongside the 18th fairway.

"But it's a different course when you're under pressure," said Lopez-Melton after her best opening round of 1980. "I have a little different attitude than when I'm practising."

Tied for second were Jerilyn Britz, the defending United States Open champion, South African Sally Little and Clifford Ann Creed. They matched 69s on the overcast, windy day.

Among those in a deadlock at 70 were Hollis Stacy, Barbara Moxness, Donna Horton White and Jane Blalock.

JoAnne Carner, the winner of five U.S. amateurs and two Opens and bidding for her first LPGA championship, settled for a 71.

A pre-round putting tip from host pro Tim Wilkins helped Lopez-Melton.

"He said I was picking my putter up on my backstroke. I took that advice out onto the course."

The year's first of three major events carries a total purse of $150,000 with $22,500 going to the winner.

Family feud over will frittered away a million

TORONTO (CP) — An Ontario Supreme Court decision dismissing an application by a Toronto woman for a larger share of her husband's estate has revealed how a $1-million legacy was frittered away in futile attempts to gain possession of it.

The will provided for all family members but now there is little money for anyone.

Since the death in 1971 of her husband Edward Assaf, who owned a highly-successful Toronto restaurant, Vivian Assaf and her son William have spent a large portion of the estate on lawyers while trying to gain control of the money.

William was sentenced in 1978 to 2½ years in prison for forging a will which left the fortune to his mother and himself.

Mr. Justice J. D. Cromarty said in a written decision that William Assaf and his mother were like figures in a classical tragedy, bent on destroying their monetary inheritance.

"His (William Assaf's) mind is warped by what he perceives as wrongs done to him and his mother by his father, whom he described as a 'jerk,' whose nose he once broke in a fight and of whom he said 'I hate him, mother got a raw deal'."

The estate, which had a net worth of $1 million after payment of debts and taxes, now is worth between $150,000 and $281,000, almost exclusively as a result of legal actions brought by Mrs. Assaf and her son against the executors and solicitors of the estate, Cromarty said.

He said an additional $100,000 will have to be deducted from the estate to pay outstanding legal and executor fees and there are more court battles to be fought.

Assaf had willed $20,000 a year for life to his wife, the minimum required by law in relation to the size of his estate, and $10,000 a year for life to his son.

A relative was to receive $5,000 a year for life and almost all of the remainder was to go to Assaf's daughter, Barbara Evans.

The estate, which consisted mostly of the assets of Assaf's restaurant, was held in trust until 1974 when it was turned over to the executors. But William Assaf pretended he owned the restaurant, took money from the till, as did his mother, charged long-distance telephone calls to the restaurant's account and entertained friends there without paying, despite protests from the manager, the judgment said.

When restaurant staff reproached William Assaf for his behavior, he became violent, resulting in a conviction for assult. He was also sentenced to 18 months in jail for stealing food from the restaurant's kitchen.

The son and the mother ignored a subsequent court injunction which barred them from the restaurant and Mrs. Assaf admitted in court to having taken $113,406 from restaurant funds.

Since 1971, the mother and son have proceeded with many actions involving a series of lawyers. Some of the actions were described by judges hearing them as frivolous, vexatious and entirely without merit.

Mrs. Evans, the daughter, now is suing the executors and others for not having done their job properly.

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has sold a Telidon communications system to the United States, a move which will allow some lucky Washington, D.C., consumers to delve into a special computerized information system with a flick of their fingers.

Doug Parkhill, assistant deputy minister for research with the federal communications department, said the government-designed system has been sold for about $475,000 to the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, the National Telecommunications and Information Administration and the department of health, education and welfare.

He said the system will be used for the first consumer trials in the U.S. later this fall.

The system consists of 60 modified color TV sets equipped with calculator-like key pads and will be used on a trial basis in 60 Washington homes, Parkhill said.

The computer will be managed by WETA, the local Public Broadcasting System station, and New York University's Alternate Media Centre.

John Davidson, head of the department's information service, said more Telidon sales to U.S. companies will be announced within a few months.

Telidon was selected over similar, but technologically "more primitive," British and French systems, he said.

Davidson said viewers can punch special codes into their keypads and watch their screens light up with information contributed to the computer by The Washington Post, The Washington Star, the Smithsonian Institute and several government departments through six Telidon input terminals.

Although it can also be used as a two-way information system allowing active user participation, the Telidon system to be used in Washington will be one-way only and will provide viewers with printed text, graphics and photos.

Parkhill said Telidon is already being tested for general consumer use in Canada and should be commercially available within two years if the tests are successful.

Stadium's roof tower unstable, work halted

MONTREAL (CP) The Quebec goverment has decided to halt construction of the Olympic stadium tower for the time being because of serious problems with the structure's stability.

Claude Charron, the minister responsible for the Olympic Installations Board, said today the decision was made at a cabinet meeting last weekend, where discussions centred on reports indicating the base of the 170-metre tower was not strong enough to support the weight of the massive structure.

Charron told a news conference the board has been authorized to complete only two additional storeys before work is suspended.

The problems with the tower were discussed by a special watchdog committee set up by the government in June of last year headed by Michel Kazanovitch, an engineer with Hydro-Quebec.

A study dealing with the possibile completion of the tower and the installation of the umbrella-like, retractable roof on the 70,000-seat stadium is to be completed by this fall, Charron said.

He promised it will be made public as soon as he receives it.

Mayor Jean Drapeau, meanwhile, said Thursday he will have no immediate comment on an inquiry report that points to him as the main culprit behind the $1.6-billion price tag on the 1976 Olympic Games.

Real Facts:

About Chrysler gas economy.

Fuel efficient cars? You don't have to wait for next year's models. Chrysler has them now! Every one of our standard models is rated 23 MPG or better. (That's 12.5L per 100 km.) Chrysler's gas economy leaders are 4-cylinder, front-wheel drive Dodge Omni and Plymouth Horizon at a remarkable 36.2 MPG (or 7.8L per 100 km) according to the real facts published by Transport Canada. There isn't another car designed and built in North America that's easier on gas than Dodge Omni and Plymouth Horizon.

About Chrysler prices.

Whoever said you had to pay a big price to get an economical, fuel efficient car, hadn't compared Chrysler's price for Dodge Omni and Plymouth Horizon. Compare with comparably equipped VW Rabbit and Honda Accord. Besides the fact that we believe Omni and Horizon are more beautifully styled and finished, you'll discover they're more attractively priced too. Why pay more?

About Chrysler roominess.

Just because you want a car that's more efficiently sized, doesn't mean you have to settle for driving around all cramped and uncomfortable. Front-wheel drive Dodge Omni and Plymouth Horizon have been designed to give you maximum roominess and comfort in a car that takes up minimum space on the road. The engine has even been transverse mounted for every bit of available leg-room. Compare Omni and Horizon with Chevette and Acadian. You can't dispute the real facts, and the real facts say Omni and Horizon are more comfortably roomy!

Love for Snowbird still hot despite chill of prison cell

TORONTO (CP) — The man who has ardently chased singer Anne Murray across Canada for six years, begging her to run off with him to his Saskatchewan wheat farm, won't say what kindles his feelings.

"If the snowbird doesn't sing, should the jailbird be a canary?" Robet Keiling asked in an interview from a Toronto jail.

He was sentenced recently to 60 days after disobeying a probation order that he stay away from Miss Murray.

Keiling was placed on two years probation and fined $300 after he jumped onstage during one of the singer's performances at her high school reunion in Springhill, N.S.

When police arrested Keiling at Toronto International Airport later that day, he was waiting with two tickets to Regina in his pocket.

A psychiatrist testified in court that Keiling is a normal person except for his singular delusion that he has a romantic relationship with Miss Murray.

Keiling, 44, said his favorite song is Snowbird, partly because it tells of unfulfilled love, but he said all of Miss Murray's music is sincere and artistic.

However, Miss Murray says that as far as Keiling is concerned there is nothing to sing about. She testified Keiling pestered her even after meeting her husband and two children.

The bachelor has collected all of her albums and criss-crossed the country to attend her concerts, making numerous marriage proposals.

In an interview, Keiling said Miss Murray had never entirely repudiated him although "I have annoyed her, I have irritated her."

The wheat farmer laughed when asked what he has to offer Miss Murray.

"Nothing," he said.

Following his latest court appearance, Keiling was told by the judge he must return to his home in Blumenhof, a hamlet of fewer than 50 people, and obtain psychiatic help.

PO brass bucking for parity

OTTAWA (CP) — The 4,000-member association representing post office supervisors has rejected a tentative contract with the government because it was not as good as deals won by letter carriers and inside workers, the union's secretary-treasurer said Thursday.

Joe Santamaria said 65 per cent of the members of the Association of Postal Officials of Canada rejected the agreement's 9.4-per-cent wage increase, apparently because it did not include cost-of-living allowances or other benefits comparable to those recently won by the other two unions.

Santamaria said letter carriers' salaries jumped close to the minimum wage for supervisors, partly because of a cost-of-living adjustment. Now, the supervisors want a cost-of-living allowance of their own or a larger wage increase.

Mortgage fight got him fired?

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — A local real estate salesman says he was fired from one of the country's largest trust companies because he was a member of the Canadian Homeowner's Association, a group lobbying for lower interest rates.

Murray McLaughlin, 52, head of the association's Kitchener chapter, said Wednesday he was fired last week from Canada Trust Company, where he had worked for almost four years, because he circulated a petition to protest home mortgage rates that peaked at 16 to 17 per cent.

The petition, signed by about 30,000 people in the Kitchener area and about 1 million throughout Canada, urges that government control home mortgage rates.

"The higher-ups in the company had been on my back since I started with the association in February," he said. " I think that's the main reason I was let go."

"I guess they didn't like the idea of someone from the company going around trying to lower mortgage rates."

McLaughlin also directs the local 200-member real-estate sales association, formed to win better workng conditions for agents.

But Merv Roth, manager-broker of the 21-employee local office, said McLaughlin's firing was disciplinary, not a result of his other activities.

"There is no doubt in my mind McLaughlin was fired for legitimate reasons," Roth said. "He was an uncontrollable individual who caused problems around the office. I had no alternative but to fire him or let him destroy the functioning of the office."

"We didn't particularly care for his comments about mortgage rates but they had nothing to do with his firing. And we had no particular objection to his membership in the salesman's organization, as long as its demands were reasonable."

McLaughlin, now working for a smaller Waterloo broker, said he will not complain about his dismissal to the provincial department of labor.

Roth said McLaughlin behaved boorishly in the office, often subjecting secretaries to vulgar jokes and causing enough disruption that several agents had to stop dealings with clients.

McLaughlin disputed this.

"The company told me my language was bad, that I tended to swear a lot and disrupt the office. I agree I am no saint but it is not enough of a reason to fire someone."

He said his directorship of the salesmen's group was another reason he was fired.

"Brokers thought we were trying to form a union to curtail their activities. They figured it was not needed."

The bidding has gone:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 NT

You lead the six of hearts, on which East plays the king and South the four. East returns the deuce of hearts, on which South plays the nine. How do you plan to defend and why?

To start with, you try to determine declarer's exact heart holding originally. This is not nearly as difficult as it seems. The answer is that South must have started with precisely the Q-9-4 of hearts! Why? Because if East had any holding that included the K-Q of hearts he would have played the queen at trick one, not the king. South is therefore marked by East's king play with the queen of hearts.

Furthermore, East's return of the deuce of hearts at trick two indicates that he started with precisely four hearts originally. (It is customary to return your original fourth-best card in partner's suit so that your partner will learn how many cards in the suit declarer started with. Thus if East had been dealt only the K-5-2 of hearts he would return the five, not the two.)

All these thoughts should lead you to the firm conclusion that declarer's original heart holding was the Q-9-4. It is therefore certain that if you duck South's nine of hearts, or take the nine with the ace and continue the suit, declarer is practically certain to make the contract — whatever the nature of his opening bid.

You have only one real chance to defeat the contract — a slim one, it is true — and that is the possibility that your partner has the ace of diamonds. Accordingly, after taking South's nine of hearts at trick two, you lead the deuce of diamonds. If this is your lucky day, East wins the deuce of diamonds with the ace, returns a diamond, and the contract goes down one when you win the first five tricks. In effect, you hope that South's hand looks something like this:

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"Did you ever check the serial number of this old passport, Dad?" Ron asked. "I just found something special about it."

Clem shook his head. "I don't suppose I ever did, but anyway I certainly don't remember it now."

"Well, you could figure it out," the boy told him. "If you switch the first pair of digits and the other three you get just one less than three times the number."

What was it?

Thanks to P. C. Mehta, Toronto, Ontario.

CLUES ACROSS

1. SPORTS not shorts. "SPORTS" is the more reasonable answer, since shorts are simply worn for their suitability, without real fondness.
5. SHADES not spades. Spades can well get dirty immediately when they are put into use, rather than more or less "soon."
6. CRONY not crone. "CRONY" links up more particularly with the clue's theme of long acquaintance, also, as a person one knows over the years, a woman is hardly viewed as a "crone."
7. PADDING not pudding. It would take considerable eating of pudding to gain weight. However, it is not unusual for actors to wear PADDING to appear fat.
11. CASE not cask. You'd hardly expect consumers to have rum available by the cask, so the question of getting through or not getting through a whole cask is hardly apt. A CASE (i.e., of bottles) of rum is a more realistic answer.
14. PEN not pan. There is point in buying an expensive pan which is expected to cook better and/or clean more easily; however, "practically" speaking, a cheap PEN will serve just as well for occasional use.
15. TOYS not boys. It is normal for boys to get very dirty at times, and not unhygienic provided they clean up afterwards. TOYS are the sort of things that can acquire a permanently grubby aspect that some parents might not like.
16. SEED not shed. It is a reasonable generalization that garden SEED will keep for one year, if perhaps not much longer. The clue's concern with the "next" year is inappropriate in the case of a shed, which should last for decades.
20. RIDER not river. The muddy stretch in question would be regarded as part of the river, rather than as an area passed "over" by the river.
23. MOUSE not moose. The clue reflects the idea that you might not object to this animal being killed (your concern being rather that the killing should be humane). This attitude suits the MOUSE, as vermin, rather than the moose.
24. DUCKS not docks. Aptly, DUCKS are distinctly separate things from water (but very much "associated" with water). Water is, however, an essential part of the docks, to all practical intents.

CLUES DOWN

1. SOCKS not sacks. Sacks are usually or characteristically (rather than merely "quite" often) brownish.
3. HANDY not sandy. Handiness is the more realistic consideration. Though he may well favor sands, the visitor is hardly concerned with degrees of sandiness, nor is he apt to have inquired as to how sandy the beach is.
4. BEEN not keen. As the clue implies, a girl who's BEEN on the stage has acted in a small way at least. Being "keen on the stage" can merely reflect a strong interest inthe theatre, not particularly related to acting as a career.
9. WANDER not wonder. "Having landed," they are presumably free to WANDER and thus satisfy their curiosity, so why should they merely wonder?
10. SCAB not scar. Aptly, a SCAB covers a place where you have been bleeding recently. Usually, a scar is that of a more or less old injury, which it is inapt to think of as "no longer bleeding."
13. COLLIES not dollies. Fine COLLIES are animals to be proud of. Little girls are not generally concerned with the quality of their dollies.

Olympic stamp cancelled if troops still in Afghanistan

OTTAWA (CP) — A stamp to commemorate the Moscow Olympics will "obviously be cancelled" before its July 4 release date if Soviet troops haven't pulled out of Afghanistan, Postmaster-General Andre Ouellet said Thursday.

But Ouellet said he's protecting himself by putting off the decision "until the last minute."

"If I destroy the stamp too quickly and there was a last-minute agreement on the Olympics, I would look like a damn fool," he said in an interview.

Ouellet said he is uncertain of the cost of cancelling the 35-cent stamp but estimated it would be between $35,000 and $50,000.

In the Commons, the postmaster-general said the decision on the stamp will be made "in the next few days."

He was responding to Conservative Otto Jelinek, MP for Ontario's Halton riding, who asked why the Liberals have waited so long to make a decision the stamp.

The Liberals announced their decision April 22 to support the U.S.-led boycott of the Moscow Games.

Ouellet pointed out that the former Conservative government had not cancelled the stamp after the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan in December.

John Fraser, postmaster-general in the Conservative government, said his government was defeated before the Afghanistan invasion. He was too busy with the Feb. 18 election to do anything about the stamp and left it to his Liberal predecessor.

Billy Bishop shot down on Broadway

NEW YORK (CP) — Critics made good their unreserved praise of Canadian actor Eric Peterson, awarding him one of the New York theatre's most distinguished prizes Thursday for his starring role as air ace Billy Bishop.

The announcement that Peterson had won the Clarence Derwent Award as the most promising actor of the New York season came as the Saturday closing notice was posted for Billy Bishop Goes To War at the Morosco Theatre.

Heavy financial losses forced the new Canadian play about the Canadian war hero's exploits to end its brief run on Broadway, but the producers are trying to keep it airborne in New York at a smaller theatre off Broadway.

Peterson's extraordinary performance as Bishop, the young man who shot down 72 German planes in the First World War, as well as 16 other parts, received several rave reviews from New York critics.

A jury of critics and theatre personalities named Peterson the winner of the Derwent award, established in 1944 by the late actor and former president of Actors Equity Association.

Diane Weist won the female award as the Scatter-brained restaurant patron in The Art of Dining, a play which opened last fall.

The British Clarence Derwent awards, administered in London for productions on the London stage, went to Felicity Kendall for her role as Constanza in Amadeus and to Richard Griffiths for his portrayal of Lariosik in White Guard.

Past Derwent winners on Broadway include George C. Scott, Fritz Weaver, Judy Holliday, Barbara Bel Geddes, Gene Hackman, Gene Wilder and Tom Ewell.

Peterson, to be honored at the awards luncheon today, will receive a $1,000 cash prize and an engraved crystal egg.

Escapism seems to be the vogue on Broadway with revivals such as West Side Story and Oklahoma! — the big productions — filling houses along with Sugar Babies and the forthcoming Camelot, starring Richard Burton, which had an early advance $250,000 in the first hours after tickets went on sale.

Billy Bishop Goes To War is really a small, two-man musical — hard to sell in New York at $18 and $20 tops. But the audiences that did see it often gave Peterson and John Gray, who wrote, composed and directed the play, standing ovations.

"We're closing at the Morosco, we're not closing the show," said Christopher Wootten, executive director of the Vancouver East Cultural Centre and co-producer of the play. It was seen by audiences in a dozen Canadian cities and Washington before coming to New York.

"Either we're going to move the show into an off-Broadway house or we're going to move it back to Canada. We're going to be reopening in a couple of weeks somewhere."

Billy Bishop Goes To War will close Saturday night after 12 public and seven preview performances.

Sources close to the operation say costs at the Morosco Theatre for Billy Bishop Goes To War were running between $40,000 and $50,000 a week. Audiences for the play often were papered in the 1,000-seat house.

Investors from Vancouver and New York put an estimated $300,000 into the production to bring it to Broadway. An artistic success, it may wind up as a $400,000 financial flop.

Variety, the trade magazine of show business, reported that generally the recession is hurting the theatre business, too.

Business tapered off as 23 of the 28 continuing shows lost ground last week, total box office receipts declined about four per cent and paid attendance was down 6.8 per cent to 67.6 per cent of capacity.

Variety's figures for Billy Bishop, published Wednesday, showed paid attendance for the first four previews was 3,588 or 88.9 per cent of capacity, with net earnings of $8,374.

Last week — the theatrical week runs from Monday through Sunday inclusive — there were three preview and five regular performances with paid attendance of 2,442, or 30.3 per cent of capacity, and a net total of $20,048. The house is scaled to earn a net of $150,000 a week.

Across the street, the hit play Best Little Whorehouse In Texas was playing last week to an 82-per-cent capacity with a net of $141,218 at the box office.

Meanwhile, Billy Bishop Goes To War has been invited to appear at the Edinburgh Festival in August, the first Canadian theatre company since the Stratford Festival in 1956.

"We're just negotiating how to do the Manitoba Theatre Centre in October and a theatre in New Brunswick in January," Wootten said. "And we're going to go to the Bermuda Festival next Jan. 27, so we're not finished by any means. This is only part of it.

"We could reopen next week in New York if we had a theatre, but we don't. If it's going to happen, it may be in two weeks. That's what we want to do."

Bell found . . . in pieces

QUEBEC (CP) — A 480-kilogram bell stolen during the weekend from a partially burned Roman Catholic church in Quebec City was found by provincial police Thursday in a scrap yard in Rimouski, Que. It was in 30 pieces. A scrap dealer told police he bought the bronze and copper alloy pieces from some young men for $210. It was cast in England in 1884.

MGM, CBS eye videodisc trade

By KATHRYN HARRIS
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Film Co. and CBS Inc. have announced a joint venture for the worldwide marketing of videodiscs and videocassettes, which would include MGM's library of more than 1,600 films.

While company executives indicated that the first videodiscs probably will be manufactured for the needle-in-the-groove technology developed by RCA Corp. and scheduled for store sales early next year, there is nothing to preclude the new venture from selling products made for rival videodisc technologies.

Although no label has been designed, both the MGM and CBS names are expected to appear on logos.

Cy Leslie, hired by CBS in February as president of its Video Enterprises division, said CBS initially will subcontract the manufacturing of videocassettes, which may go on sale by the end of the year. He said the company expects to begin producing videodiscs in its new Carrollton, Ga., record-stamping plant early next year.

There had been rumors of the venture for six months, and Wednesday's announcement did not create a stir among industry analysts in New York.

"All the major companies are getting in bed with a supplier," said Andrew Saxe, a consultant in the home video market.

However, he added, he regards the videodisc market in the foreseeable future as "minute."

The joint venture was announced just five days after the creation of the MGM Film Co., spun off from the hotel and gaming operations now under the MGM Grand Hotels Inc.

Since MGM recently has been making fewer than a half-dozen films a year, some observers regarded the timing of the announcement as a way of bolstering the film company's image among investors.

Both MGM and CBS will make available future entertainment productions to the marketing venture in videodiscs and cassettes, including the output of a new theatrical motion picture production unit launched by CBS.

Frank E. Rosenfelt, MGM's chairman of the board and chief executive, reiterated Wednesday that MGM intends to increase its feature film production to 15 to 20 films a year under the direction of its president, David Begelman.

MGM already has made available to RCA some 300 titles from its library under a 4½-year-old agreement that expires at the end of the year, Rosenfelt said. If the agreement is renewed, it will be negotiated via the new joint venture with CBS, he said.

RCA has made a massive financial and promotional commitment to launch its capacitance videodisc system during the first quarter of 1981, including a non-exclusive agreement with CBS for the latter to manufacture discs using the RCA technology.

Who'll wear Hack's halo?

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — They're measuring beautiful girls for halos at 20th Century-Fox where the new Charlie's Angel will be chosen to replace the departing Shelley Hack in the weekly jiggle series.

Whomever Aaron Spelling, Leonard Goldberg and ABC executives finally choose as the new angel, she will have a passport to instant fame and perhaps stardom.

It was a national cause celebre when Farrah Fawcett decamped three years ago after a single season with the show. Happily for all concerned, she was replaced by another sensuous blonde, Cheryl Ladd.

There was much ado when peppery Kate Jackson split last year. Her decolletage was filled by Shelley. For whatever reason, Shelley didn't quite fit in. Earlier this year it was announced she would be leaving.

This time around, Spelling-Goldberg has chosen not to issue cattle calls for beautiful women who may or may not be able to act. Instead, they hired Lynn Stalmaster, Hollywood's premiere casting director.

Stalmaster, a former actor in his middle years, has been casting motion pictures and television shows for more than 20 years, recently abetted by his pretty blonde partner, Toni Howard.

"Jayne has postponed accepting a role in an on-the-air series to await the decision about the new angel," said Toni.

"It's very hard to find beautiful women who can act. Or handsome men who can act, for that matter. Too many good-looking people get by on their looks early in their careers and don't take time to learn to act."

Neither Stalmaster nor Toni could provide a reason why Hack did not work out as an angel. They said she was brought along slowly, perhaps too slowly, and never given an opportunity to shine.

"Spelling-Goldberg gave us carte blanche," Stalmaster said. "There are no restrictions in this casting except avoiding lookalikes of present or past angels. Any nationality or color is acceptable.

"We've searched in New York, Dallas, Chicago, San Francisco and Las Vegas for girls in their early to late 20s. Our angel can't be too tall or too short. The producers want a beautiful face and an attractive figure.

"The final decision, of course, will not be ours. The new angel will be decided by Spelling-Goldberg in concert with the people at ABC."

Stalmaster doesn't make final decisions. After reading a script, he provides studio, producer or director (sometimes all three) with his best suggestions for actors for particular roles.

They sometimes don't take his advice, only to discover at another time that Stalmaster has an unfailing eye for young talent.

Head blow cause of death as Duncan murder probed

DUNCAN — RCMP said today a blow on the head caused the death of a Vancouver real estate appraiser whose nude body was found in the bush near the Cowichan River Tuesday.

Investigators today confirmed following an autopsy that 29-year-old Suzanna Seto was murdered in her hotel room at the Village Green Inn where she registered Monday night.

An inquest is planned but deputy coroner Jock Colliar said a date hasn't been set.

Seto was to have conducted a land appraisal in the district for a client of her employer, Cumberland Realty Group of Vancouver.

A police spokesman said there was a disturbance at the hotel and a report of something unusual in Seto's room. A search led to discovery of her body that afternoon in a wooded area between the hotel and the nearby Cowichan River.

Police said a large number of people were being interviewed, hotel staff among them.

Village Green manager Dave Rose said he knew little of the affair.

"I've been totally in the dark. I was out of the hotel all Tuesday afternoon and not back until Wednesday morning."

But he said guests in the hotel had heard some noises Tuesday without reporting a disturbance at the time.

Apparently it was some time later that concern for Seto resulted in a search.

Insp. Bruce Terkelsen said police had been hampered by the late start on the investigation.

A missing attache case and purse were located Thursday in the Cowichan River about 500 yards downstream from the body.

The Romance of the Long Distance Mover

Long-distance moving . . . a matter of picking up a load here and dropping it there, a dull and rather monotonous business, right? Let Bill Brown and Walter Webster, partners in Alliance Moving & Storage Ltd., be the first to tell you it just isn't so. It's a romantic business, hauling loads across the breadth of a continent. Did you know that most of the tractors used in the business are driver owned? The trailers they pull are usually the property of the moving company for which they work. The rig driver or "mover" is the aristocrat of the trade and Bill Brown maintains you can tell it by the way he keeps both himself and his equipment — spotless.

Bill Brown, President of Alliance, and partner Walter Webster, General Manager, both have been in the business a total of 55 years and they both will tell you that once the long-hauler gets distance in his blood he stays with it. Their company, formed nine years ago, was taken over by Bill and Walter two years ago. Business is good and coming into the summer season, gets even better. A lot of families put off moving until summer and the children are out of school, and most moving companies depend on the heavy summer business to carry them through the winter.

A Family Firm, Building on the Future

Ron Tidman Contruction, a family firm with its roots right in the Saanich Peninsula, maintains quality does count. It must, because with several jobs in progress, Tidman Construction's 12 employees are kept very busy maintaining constant and careful supervision. Located off Kirkpatrick at the west end of the industrial park, the firm does an increasing volume of business each year. Acting as general contractor for better-quality built homes as well as commercial work, Tidman sub-contracts to the trades with whom it has a good relationship.

The company started with Roy Tidman, father of Ron and John, who owned his own contracting company for many years. "It is a moderate-sized family business and we are trying to maintain tight, supervisory control. In this way we are able to maintain the high quality work which we believe is what is bringing this steady flow of business to us.

They feel that they are linked to the future of the Saanich Peninsula and both expect a bright future. As evidence of this faith both in Central Saanich and the Keating Industrial Park, Ron Tidman is a partner in Keating Park Estates, a 15-acre enclave within the park off Kirkpatrick Road.

Land Developers of the First Order

T & H Construction and its owner, Dave Thomson, specialize in the acquisition of the bare land, sub-division design and coordination, joint venturs on residential properties with land owners, bare land strata title subdivisions, industrial and commercial site work and design. T & H Construction is basically a land development company and Dave Thomson is a land developer who's roots are deep in the Saanich Peninsula.

His forebearers have been around the Peninsula for a very long time. they were, in their own right, land developers of the first order and without them there would only be about six families on the peninsula today. Dave's great grandfather, James Wilson Thomson, came to this district as a farmer in the 1870s. On the other side of his family, Dave's great grandfather John Slugget, farmed a huge area in the 1870's which encompassed virtually all of Brentwood Bay from Verdier to Benvenuto, and was purchased for $7 an acre.

Dave is a founder of the Keating Industrial Park and of the Keating Industrial Association. He is also part owner of Keating Park Estates, an industrial enclave within the park. In concert with Rod Tidman Construction Ltd., they have recently completed the majority of buildings constructed on Kirkpatrick Crescent.

Jealous of his reputation as a developer, Thomson looks after the interests of his clients who eventually will own homes on land he has processed. He will not sell more than two lots to the same individual in order to protect the buyer and save the mnicipality from a development in which scores of homes are the same. Thomson is wrapped up in Keating and the Saanich Peninsula where he lives and works; it has long been Thomson territory.

The Mark of the Park

Cleaner Carpets . . . Automatically

Very hot water and a powerful vacuum are the two elements used to extract dirt from carpets, upholstered furniture and drapery by Victoria Steamatic Co., Ltd. It's a simple, effective approach; the hot water dissolves the dirt and the vacuum extracts both without the use of sticky soaps or shampoos. The dirty water is returned to the truck and the clean fabric is left to dry in short order.

This principle of cleaning has been successfully used by Steamatic world wide, incorporating as it does over 30 years of experience.

Victoria Steamatic, located in the Keating Industrial Park, was founded in July 1979 by Roger Workman, previous owner of a successful franchise in Kemptville, Ontario for over five years.

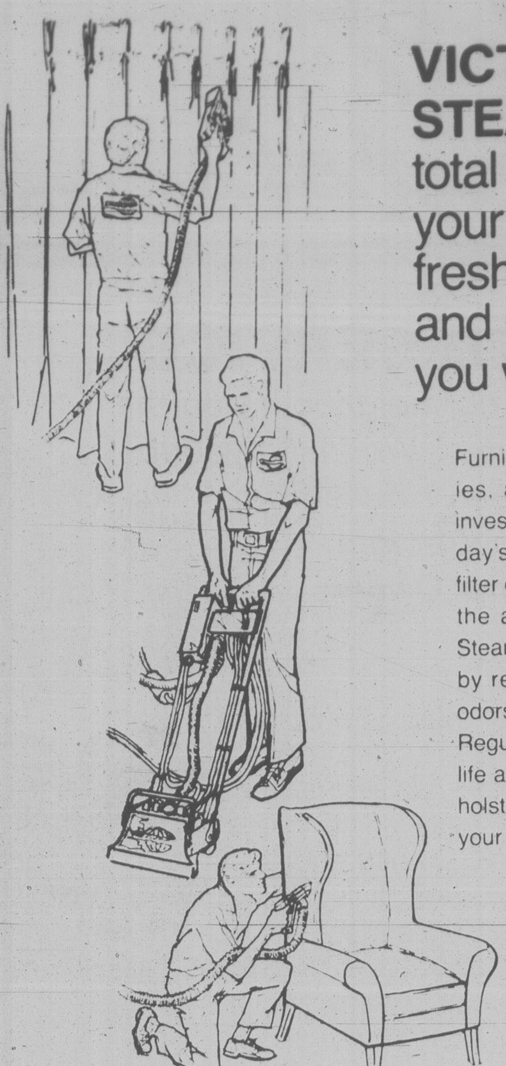
The truck-mounted unit which visits the home of Steamatic clients heats its own water by propane and is entirely self-contained. The dirty water is taken away in the tank when the processor leaves the premises. Steamatic is able to clean in the home or in the branch shop, whichever is more convenient for their customers. Free estimates are given, including estimates for cleaning in boats, campers and automobile interiors.

Coast and Madigan Merge Operations

Coast Tractor of Vancouver and Madigan Equipment of Prince George, two of the province's largest independent distributors of John Deere logging, construction and utility equipment, have merged operations. This newly merged, wholly B.C. owned distributorship now rates in the top five John Deere heavy equipment dealerships in North America, under the name Coast Tractor.

Heading the new company is Peter J. Kelly, president, with Ron Kincade of Madigan Equipment as vice president of product support. Amalgamation of the two companies give it a competitive edge in the heavy equipment industry, particularly since the introduction of the new and bigger equipment joining the John Deere line. Specifically the JD 850 bulldozer, the JD 844 wheel loader and the 1½-yard JD 890 hydraulic excavator, each with largest in its class made by John Deere. "Introduction of these machines has opened a new vista for us as distributors," explained Peter Kelly. "They have attracted the larger construction and logging companies to the John Deere line. By merging our dealerships we can offer the coordinated backup of province-wide distributorships." They can supply 90% of their customer's needs from local stock and in addition they carry larger inventories and offer their customers a full range of sales contracts.

Customers will have a broader range of both new and used equipment to choose from, a full range of rental plans and conditional sales contracts. Plus competitive rates, tailored to whatever best suits the customer. Coast Tractor and Madigan Equipment are also dealers for Pengo fully-forged bucket teeth, Berco undercarriage for John Deere-size equipment and Aeroquip hydraulic hose.



VICTORIA STEAMATIC brings its total cleaning service to your home, for brighter, fresher carpets, draperies and upholstery, while you wait!

Furnishing your home with carpets, draperies, and upholstered furniture is a major investment, especially when you consider today's prices. Fabrics in your home actually filter out smoke, cooking odors and oils, from the air, and trap dirt between fibers. But Steamatic helps you protect your investment, by reaching dirt and releasing stains and odors ordinary cleaning methods can't reach. Regular Steamatic cleaning can give longer life and beauty to carpets, draperies and upholstery — all in just a few hours — right in your home!

The fact that Coast Tractor and Equipment Ltd. moved from a trailer in the Goldstream area to a 4500 square foot new building in the Keating Estates section of Keating Industrial Park a week ago, is evidence of the growth of the John Deere agency.

Loaders, skidders, crawlers, scrapers, feller-bunchers, tree harvesters and backhoes are among the items of heavy industrial equipment sold by Coast Tractors which is under the direction of branch manager John Stubbs.

In charge of the five-man shop which will do all kinds of servicing, is Ivan Pendleton who has been in the business for a long time.

Coast Tractors will service equipment both in the shop and in the field and, as John Stubbs points out, John Deere is on an interest-free program on equipment sold up to July 31.

An Energy-Oriented Drilling Company

Ken's Drilling Ltd. started operations as a water well drilling firm with one rig in 1966. Since then they have expanded to five rigs operating in Victoria and one in Calgary. The company now works in coal exploration, industrial drilling as well as rural water systems.

The burgeoning coal industry augers well for this Victoria-based company. The company intends to actively pursue all phases of the energy market, and part of this will entail the development of the ground water heat pump. This unit is designed to extract the heat from ground water and use it to heat homes and offices. The efficiency of this unit is twice that of the conventional air-to-air heat pump.

Ken's Drilling Ltd. is also examining the oil and gas drilling market from it's Calgary office. With the emergence of alternate energy sources the company hopes to become a fully-integrated, energy-oriented drilling company.

Local Company Makes Good

G.W.G. Rentals opened its doors in 1972 on Veyaness Road, with concrete pumps and boom truck service. It expanded into tool and equipment rental in 1978 moving into Keating Park Estates with a staff of three. The steady growth continues and G.W.G. Rentals now employs a full time staff of six. The company continually adds new equipment to its rental fleet, for example, it's Tool Bus Service; propane refills; repairs; as well as the full line of contractor and home-owner equipment for rent or purchase that the company is famous for.

Owner Ed Gait is deeply involved in community affairs. Last year, he worked with Bill Eastgate and Ron Tidman to set up the Keating Industrial Association which is playing such an important role in the careful development of the Park. In March Ed was elected Alderman on the Central Saanich Council.

Milos Equipment, Another Link in Chain

When Milos Equipment moved into their new headquarters in the west end of Keating Industrial Park, it was another link in a dealership's chain which extends over a large portion of British Columbia.

Glenn Fidler heads up a staff of six who operate the dealership here for Milos Equipment Ltd., a company started 14 years ago by Jack Milos, a Yugoslav immigrant. With a record of steady growth, the company now comprises six branches operating in two totally different market areas.

In Prince George the branches serve logging and mining customers with heavy construction equipment. The formula which has taken the Milos company from a single outlet in Prince George to six agencies covering more than three-quarters of British Columbia is one for other firms in the Keating Industrial Park to emulate. "Identify an opportunity," Milos says, "and then seize upon it and throw every ounce of energy and resources into the opportunity whatever the risks involved."

"The main advantage in rapid expansion through branches," Milos says, "is that customers can be serviced easier at a reduced overall cost. They also enjoy the convenience of local facilities for service and parts."

His only regret over the rapid expansion in the equipment market, the Milos president says, is the difficulty he has in maintaining contact with his 85 employees. Glenn Fidler and his people at Keating Park say they are getting along just fine. Business is good and the move into the new building will make life easier and business more productive and efficient.

The Heating People . . .

Rod Noble and Rich Giles of Noble and Giles Heating Ltd. opened their business a scant year ago, however it is based on a total of thirty-three years of experience in the sheetmetal and heating field. They specialize in industrial and apartment as well as residential heating and ventilation. Specifically fireplace heaterlator conversions, furnace installation and conversion and heat pumps. In the near future Rod and Rich intend to expand their business into the increasingly popular utilization of solar heating. Like the other tenants of Keating Park Estates, Rod Noble and Rich Giles are pinning their hopes for a bright future on the continued growth of this area.

The Glass People . . .

Robert's Glass is comprised of a man and wife team, Cathy, a Victoria girl, and Bob from Alert Bay. After operating Robert's Glass for three years out of their Brentwood home, Bob and Cathy Etherington are now residents of Keating Park Estates. With 2200 square feet of handsome show space and efficient work room, the business is all set for expansion.

In this fuel-conscious period, their main occupation is thermopane conversions, storm windows and doors. Another energy conserving item is custom-fitted glass fireplace doors. Screens are a busy item at the moment and Cathy makes them right on the premises. The third employee is Neil Bodman who has over ten years' experience in the glass business in his own right. Mr. and Mrs. "Robert Glass" are anticipating a busy time ahead in their new location.

The Roofing People . . .

Pacific Coast Roofing Ltd. was formerly owned by the McGregor Brothers of Victoria, established in 1946, and purchased in 1971 by Donald Wilson. The company employees thirty to forty people and serves all of Western Canada. Some of the recently completed projects include:

Grace Children's Hospital in Vancouver
Equity Silver Mines of Houston, B.C.
The University of Victoria Administration Building, Victoria
Postal Terminal, Victoria
Court House, Victoria

The Mark of the Park

The Keating Industrial Association's logo was designed appropriately, by a member of the industrial park, Bert Orr of Knight Signs Ltd. He left a park meeting with the feeling that there should be a logotype for identification. So he simply went back to the office and designed one with the element of Keating X Road neatly incorporated into a strong emblem.

Wescraft Manufacturing Company A Division of Versatile Cornat Corporation

For over twenty-five years Wescraft has been both manufacturing and installing aluminum windows and sliding patio doors for the residential and commercial markets in Western Canada. Wescraft operates out of a 60,000 square foot building and employs about 150 personnel. The manufacturing operation is located on an eight acre site on Keating X Road. Sales distribution centres are located in Vancouver, Nanaimo and Kamloops.

An innovative company with a reputation for quality, Wescraft has pioneered anodized and painted enamel extrusions, outside glazing and more recently the exclusive thermal barrier frame system.

The company started as a small, privately owned business, and many of their craftsmen have been with Wescraft over 15 years. Now it is an operating division of Versatile Cornat Corporation, a Canadian public company with head office in Vancouver.

You Don't Just Cook With It!

The only carburetion shop on the Southern Island, Westcoast Carburetion Co. Inc. is a new member of Keating Park. However, partners Roger Bain and Dan Evans have been in the business of converting vehicles from gas to propane for many years now, long before the public became conscious of world-wide gas shortages. Together, owner-operators Dan and Roger have 25 years experience in Propane and Carburetion. Both felt that propane was the upcoming thing due to high oil prices, and time has proven them correct. The shop is capable of doing approximately thirty conversions per month. Propane has other advantages besides its availability: engines remain cleaner, thereby increasing their life span with reduced maintenance costs. Air pollution is also sharply decreased. Westcoast specializes in the conversion of larger vehicles — forklifts, pickups, trucks and motor homes as well as vehicle fleets such as taxis and delivery vans. Dual fuel conversions (gasoline and propane) average approximately $1500 with straight propane costing $150 to $200 less than this amount. Westcoast Carburetion Co. is the exclusive dealer for IMPCO equipment on Southern Vancouver Island.

Jubilee' Motto is "People make the company"

Jubilee Building Supplies Ltd. was started by a group of people who had been in the building supply business for many years. The company name, Jubilee, was chosen for its birthdate, 1977, the year of Queen Elizabeth's Silver Jubilee and for whom the principal shareholder had stood guard at her coronation.

Headed by Gerry Grealy, General Manager, the company was formed keeping in mind that people make the company and having the right people means that the public is better looked after. This is what Jubilee is trying to do with people like the following:

Gerry Grealy, General Manager, with twenty-two years of experience working for two of the most highly regarded companies in Victoria, namely Stewart and Hudson and Imperial Building Supplies. Men like Dick Cameron who started in the mill on the Green Chain and now heads the warehouse and yard as the supintendent. Sales Manager Trevor Hellam, originally with McDonald's Supplies in Vancouver in the appliance and cabinet department and now heading the sales force that will sell approximately $3 million this year. Garry Russell, with many years in sales and shipping is now our head shipper. Hutch, known by everyone as the King of Cabinets. Phil Tarr, previously sales supervisor is now manager in charge of our floor covering department. Our experienced staff also includes men like Paul Ruby Tulip with ten years experience in shipping and Martin Grealy with five yers. Jim Hyland who has spent ten years selling cabinets, has now reached the ultimate selling Merit Kitchen Cabinets. The newest member of our sales staff is Eric Remes who, when applying for the job said that he had been a salesman for thirty-five years as a barber and he is certainly proving it now. The most important member of the company is Barbara Turner, the right arm of everyone and who, together with her assistant, Anilee, keeps things running along smoothly. Then as a total, these people work as a team, enable Jubilee Building Supplies Ltd. to give the public tops in service. Come in and see for yourself.

Keating Industrial Association

The establishment of Keating Industrial Park as a drop-off point, a stock-pile centre for goods from all over Eastern Canada, may not be so far in the future, according to Bill Eastgate, chairman of the Keating Industrial Association.

The park is a natural distribution point for goods destined for Vancouver Island and the sooner manufacturers realize that they do not have to truck all the way in to Victoria, the better off they will be. To achieve this end, among others, the association is working for improvement of Keating Cross Road including easy and safe access to and from the Pat Bay Highway.

Such a staging point would ease traffic on the provincial ferry system as Ed Gait, an executive member of the association, points out. It would mean the construction of badly-needed warehousing in the industrial park and give manufactuers the opportunity to stock up in off seasons.

Bill Estgate, Ed Gait, Ron Tidman and Dave Thomson got together in 1977 and 1978 to form the association which now represents the bulk of the industrial tenants in the park, and it was this group which first brought together the province, the municipality of Central Saanich and its members in a move to do something about Keating Cross Road.

Not only has the association done what it could to generate business within the industrial park, but it has attempted with some success, to influence its members in the establishment of standards to protect both the scenery and the environment.

It has spread the word that while the industrial park is a treasury which pours tax money into the municipal coffers, its members should realize that their park is an enclosed enclave in the middle of a food-producing municipality and that they have a duty to keep their backyards clean. This good neighbor policy has been responsible for the fact that there is little or no animosity against the industrial people on the part of farmers and residents who are anxious to keep the rural atmosphere intact.

The association tries to attract new members to the park and the fact that nine new occupants have come into the park in the past few months is a mark of its success.

Another objective of the association is to let the world know that the park exists. It has taken on the publicity chores necessary to the economic health of the whole enterprise.

DID SOMEONE STEAL THE SHOW?

The great pinup pitch gets prickly response

By BRENDA DALGLISH

The tourism ministry has launched a new program called the Good Show campaign.

Its aim: To encourage employees in tourism-related industries to make a special effort to provide good service.

The program drew immediate criticism from at least one Victoria hotel employee who saw several gaps in the latest government bid to keep the dollar-laden tourists happy. He said it isn't as innocuous as it seems.

The ministry has placed postage-paid cards in hotels, taxi cabs, restaurants, gift shops — in fact about anywhere tourists might turn up.

The card asks: "Did someone steal the show?"

If the tourist feels someone was particularly helpful, he fills in the card's section which reads: "I'd like to nominate (blank space — name) to be sent a Good Show pin for (blank space — service performed)."

The cards must be signed with the nominator's name and address.

An employee will receive a Good Show button for the first nomination he receives and, in the Vancouver and Victoria areas, if he or she gets 50 nominations by the end of the season, the employee will be presented with a gold button by Premier Bill Bennett.

In other areas of the province where fewer tourists visit, fewer nominations will be required for the gold pin.

Assistant Deputy Minister John Plul said the campaign replaces the Smile campaign and will run for three years and cost about $165,000.

One hotel employee called the Times to object to the approach.

"On the surface it seems innocuous," he said.

"But when you think about it, it doesn't seem right. If you're being personable you should be doing it for its own sake, not for a pin or money or any other reason."

The employee — he asked not to be named — wanted to know how much checking will be done to see that employees don't send in their own names.

"How important is that pin going to be in the industry? Is it going to make a difference when you apply for a job?" he wondered.

He also said it may be unfair to employees like cooks who work hard behind the scenes but never come in contact with the people they serve.

"I'm not worried about myself — I'm as personable and helpful as the next guy — but I don't like the idea," he said.

Plul defended the program, saying he is pleased there will be competition to obtain a gold pin.

"I don't think people, for the sake of a pin, will be unfair about the campaign," Plul said, pointing out that anyone nominated for a gold pin will be checked out with his manager.

"For example if a doorman at a hotel received enough nominations for a gold pin, we'd check with the manager and he'd know if the employee had been pulling his weight or if he might have nominated himself," said Plul.

Since the program first started just over a week ago the ministry has received 265 nominations and the first pins have been distributed.

Plul said a couple of the cards noted that bad service had been given.

Those complaints will be handled by having the minister write to the employer, enclosing the card that was sent to the ministry with the complaint.

"Employers received the program very enthusiastically," Plul said. "It's an incentive for their employees."

The ministry has distributed promotion materials including posters for the inside door of restaurant kitchens to remind employees to work for the gold pin.

TOWN TALK

McGeer has his big dish and little dish set up on the back lawn. A few yards away, in one of the building's interior courtyards, some workmen have set up their own demonstration.

For a dish they are using a garbage can lid, pointed at the sky. This is connected by a rope to the garbage can itself.

They call it a comment on the quality of television today.

If this summer you see students with clipboards eyeing buildings and muttering about concrete thicknesses and radiation levels, don't worry.

It's just part of a $500,000 federal survey — we kid you not — under which students in B.C., Manitoba and Quebec will be looking for possible fallout shelters in the event of a nuclear war.

Federal Public Works Minister Paul Cosgrove, who announced the program, said the students will identify public and private buildings in 662 communities that can protect against radioactive fallout.

Private residences are not included in the survey.

Former police chief Jack Gregory, who retired from the Victoria force in February after 16 years as chief constable, is thinking about taking an overseas foreign aid job.

Rumor has him going to the Philippines, but Gregory won't comment.

"I've been approached by the Canadian Executive Service Overseas," he said.

CESO is the federal agency which sends Canadian managerial talent to assist foreign countries in their particular specialties.

A spokesman for the annual track meet for the mentally handicapped, says everyone's delighted that for the first time in years, they've got enough volunteers to handle this weekend's event out at the University of Victoria's Centennial Stadium.

Now they're just praying for a change in the weather.

Things start Saturday morning at 8:30 when Archie McKinnon opens the two-day event.

It's estimated that there are more than 300 workers involved and there are close to 700 competitors.

It's a big deal for the athletes and organizers say they'd appreciate some spectators and applause. If you can, go out and cheer them on.

Everything isn't going all to pot up at the legislature — the pot has all gone from the leg.

A government gardener has removed the eight marijuana plants seen growing in the back yard earlier this week.

The plants, discovered in a flower bed next to a fountain, were uprooted early Thursday after a few moments pulling and hoeing.

"This happens now and then," a B.C. Buildings Corp. spokesman said. "You kind of get to expect it."

For non-karate fans, that's like getting your Master's in a sport which many people consider — incorrectly — as being the next best thing to legalized mayhem.

Bateson will receive his award tonight from Steve Armstrong, considered by many in the know to be the No. 1 karate expert in North America.

We like to think of every issue of the Times as being a work of art but Jeff Markovich, a Victoria-based artist, has taken one 1979 paper and truly immortalized it.

Markovich's first egg tempura painting depicts a folded copy of the Times alongside a coffee pot and cup.

The popular artist says he likes his pieces to have a lasting quality to them and so he chose an issue of the paper that headlined a story about the safety of DC10 aircraft.

Those who saw the real thing in its newsprint form will be interested to note that the orignal was considerably cheaper than Markovich's copy which is priced at $2,200.

Deak Perera Canada Ltd., the firm which provides the foreign currency quotations for the Times' travel section each week, is offering commission-free foreign travellers' cheques during this month.

Naty King, the firm's B.C. vice-president, said the program is to increase consumer awareness of the benefits of buying foreign money before leaving on a trip.

"Experienced travellers know that it makes sense to arrive in a foreign country with a supply of the local currency and travellers' cheques rather than waiting in line at exchange counters or paying exorbitant rates at hotels, shops and restaurants," King says.

F.M. Rattenbury's, the restaurant in the Crystal Garden, will open next Monday, says general manager Christopher Causton.

The restaurant's theme will focus on the renowned architect Rattenbury, who lived a rather sensational life which ended with murder, and his partner Percy James who together designed the Garden.

Reginald Tomlinson, who knew Rattenbury and worked for James about the time the Garden was built, will be a special guest at the restaurant's opening if he recovers sufficently from a recent illness.

The restaurant will feature steaks and seafood.

$2.5 million proposal for maritime museum

By NORMAN GIDNEY

The Maritime Museum has unveiled plans for a new waterfront building at Wharf and Government which is estimated to cost $2.5 million.

It will include floating exhibits on the Inner Harbor and a reassembled working boatyard from Nanaimo.

Capt. Keith Cameron said Thursday the museum would like to take over part of the old service station — the Barrett's Beanery site, now the tourist bureau — there and build an extension along the Ship Point wharf.

But before the museum can up anchor and sail five blocks south from its present harbor in Bastion Square which has been home since 1964, it must clear a number of obstacles.

The provincial government owns the property and with the controversy over the convention centre still fresh, it is moving dead slow on any new harbor development plans.

Preliminary sketches by architects Peterson Lester and Davies of Victoria and an outline of the museum's plans were presented to Finance Minister Hugh Curtis and Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe in April.

They are being reviewed by the Provincial Capital Commission, the agency responsible for managing government waterfront property here.

"At our briefing they (the PCC) seemed quite enthusiastic," Cameron said.

The plans also hang on an affirmative response from Ottawa. The museum hopes to be designated as the Maritime Museum of the Pacific, as Halifax was named the equivalent museum of the Atlantic.

Three years ago, a consultant recommended such designation, if the Victoria museum could relocate to the waterfront. This would free federal funds for a new building.

The Visitors' Information Centre would remain but Cameron said the museum could use the space if the tourist bureau moved to the convention centre as was suggested last year.

The new museum would be on three levels, two below Wharf Street. The top level would be a library for the museum's extensive reference collection surrounded by a plaza overlooking the harbor.

Some exhibits would be on the water as well. Plans call for a footbridge connecting the middle level with a small float where historic vessels would be moored.

He hopes to get the famous Tilikum back in the water. It is a modified west coast Indian dugout canoe which Capt. John Voss sailed across the Pacific, Indian and Atlantic oceans 75 years ago, the first small boat from Canada to make such a voyage.

An old Nanaimo boatyard which the museum recently acquired, complete with wooden casting forms, hull models, C-clamps and a variety of tools — all handmade — will be set up in working order.

It was Henry Vollmers' establishment and he built more than 140 wooden fishboats and other vessels.

The firm was started by Vollmers' father in 1890 at Spotlight Cove on Galiano Island and moved to Nanaimo in 1908.

Simmons firm on detectors

Victoria fire chief Eric Simmons said Thursday the battery-operated smoke alarms the province gave away to nursing homes last year not only don't comply with the National Building Code, they don't meet the provincial fire commissioner's guidelines.

The chief this week touched off a round of provincial-municipal fingerpointing when he said the free smoke alarms distributed last year to nursing homes do not meet national standards.

Attorney-General Allan Williams, whose department supervised the $200,000 giveaway of some 9,000 smoke alarms, said the city has only itself to blame for any problems created.

Simmons was enforcing restrictions tougher than the standards in force elsewhere in the province, he claimed.

But Simmons isn't backing down and backed up his original claim with further evidence.

"Not only do battery-operated smoke alarms in nursing homes fail to meet the National Building Code standards for fire safety, they don't come up to the provincial fire commissioner's guidelines," Simmons said.

"The fire commissioner has put out a guideline — and that's the operative word, guideline. He has said he will accept battery-operated smoke alarms."

But the guidelines also specify that these devices must be accompanied by "rate-of-rise" heat detectors in all bedrooms which sound an alarm when there is a rapid increase in temperature, the chief noted.

This has not been done in the 30-bed Grant Place, 998 Humboldt, the rest home which touched off the controversy and many other homes, the chief said.

The guidelines issed March 30 last year — before the the free smoke alarms were supplied to B.C. nursing homes — apply to all health care facilities with more than 10 beds and include nursing homes and rest homes licenced as personal care and extended care hospitals.

The guidelines state: "It is hoped that through discussions with the owners it will not become necessary for the issue of orders to rectify the deficiencies under provisions of current legislation."

A spokesman for the fire commissioner's office said so far no orders have been issued requiring the replacement of the battery alarms, but upgrading of these facilities is proceeding.

Chief Simmons said battery-operated smoke alarms tell only the person in that room there is a fire. In a nursing home where patients are sometimes sedated or may be hard of hearing, this isn't good enough.

His department is still insisting on smoke detectors connected to the AC power supply which sound an alarm throughout the building.

They are the only device recognized by the code for nursing homes, he said.

Crystal tries to beat the heat

General manager Gordon Levy said today three methods will be tried to shade the building so plants won't continue to be scorched by the sun. All involve using blinds on the west side of the roof.

Visitors to the building, which has $50,000 worth of exotic plants, have complained of excessive heat.

Attendance at the Garden, which was renovated for $2.75 million, is considerably less than projected.

Levy said an average of 450 to 500 have been visiting daily since June 1 when the summer season began and senior citizens were no longer admitted free. When the project was undertaken the attendance required to stay in the black was estimated at 600 paid visitors per day.

During May 500 to 700, including non-paying visitors, were admitted daily.

The problem of lack of shading and consequent plant damage was foreseen by two consultants, Herb Warren, who advises Butchart Gardens, and Stafford Buswell, of the Bloedel Conservatory in Vancouver.

They told the Provincial Capital Commission some time ago shading would be needed.

"All commercial greenhouses practise shading in the early spring," said Warren.

Buswell said they recommended that a ventilation system be included in the rebuilding plans but it was turned down for cost reasons.

The PCC's Ken Patton said shading wasn't provided because "quite honestly we weren't convinced there would be a problem. The glass in the roof isn't clear sheet glass, it's textured and provides a lot of diffusion. We thought that might do the job without having to introduce shading methods."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, June 7, 1980
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Piece together bits of information — you can come up with "complete story." Moon in your sign coincides with added drive, power, independence. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons play significant roles. Change of plans proves beneficial.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Hold conference with close family members. You get money necessary for remodeling or special purchase. Cycle is high; circumstances will favor your efforts. Another Taurus, a Libra and Scorpio figure prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emphasis on being realistic in connection with illusion, delusion, wished and romance. You gain unusual insight into motives, designs, ultimate goals. Pisces, Virgo natives play significant roles. One who seemed "out of this world" could come crashing down to earth.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accept responsibility for business enterprise — and a relationship. Pressure is present, but cycle is such that you can emerge victorious. Capricorn, the number 8 and another Cancer figure in scenario. Older individual will lend benefit of experience.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Love dominates your personal scenario. Let go of "security blanket." Stop pondering, "What might have been." Take initiative in making future a time of fulfillment as contrasted to frustration. Aries, Libra persons play prominent roles.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Study Leo message. Refuse to be "tied up" in emotional knots. Get facts concerning money, partnership, public relations and marriage. You can make marvelous, new contact — and a fresh start. Lawsuit boomerangs in your favor.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Permit those close to you to take initiative. Wait, observe, listen, get facts concerning copyrights, special permissions, loans, liens and payments. Build for security — consult older friend or family member who has track record for loyalty.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Display optimism, humor, versatility and intellectual curiosity. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. Accent on work methods, dependents, pets, defining services and arriving at a final price for needed material. Aquarian is in picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emotional responses dominate — speculation, creative urges and romantic intentions are all part of your personal scenario. Scorpio, Taurus, Leo natives figure prominently. Change of plans will prove beneficial. Know it, act as if aware of it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Delve beneath surface — check fine print, toss aside superficial explanations. Accent security, building on solid base, making changes which please special member of opposite sex. New approach brings desirous results. Gemini, Virgo persons figure prominently.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Family, close neighbors, visitors command time and attention. Stick to basic issues, procedures. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio natives figure prominently. If humor is combined with diplomacy, you make significant gains. Money picture is brighter than originally anticipated.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent on investments, acquisitions, transforming apparent loss into profit. Another Pisces, a Virgo and an Aquarian figure in scenario. Outline objectives, define terms, be realistic in protection of assets, possessions.

IF JUNE 7th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are introspective, moody, bright, psychic, inquisitive, capable of sensing when people are not being entirely candid. Pisces, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. Social life, travel opportunities accelerate in August. This is a year in which you take positive steps to build for security. You recover from last year's "fling." Now, you have more responsibility, authority — and chances for financial success are enhanced. You are a person who does not make friends at drop of hat, but those close to you remain — you are serious and loyal and will sacrifice for sake of loved ones.

Success means hunger for star of One Life to Live

By JOHN GOUDAS

Generally speaking, most people choose to vacation in some idyllic setting where they can sightsee or lounge on a sundrenched beach, but lovely Kristen Meadows (Mimi King) of One Life to Live spends her precious time-off on a fat farm in New Jersey. Her efforts have certainly paid off as viewers got to see just how sensational her figure is when this spicy blonde was running around Llanview's Health Club in an adorable little string bikini.

''I starve myself,'' admits Kristen, who was a model with the Wilhelmina Agency, ''but it's my career we're talking about and unfortunately the business is based on how you look.''

However, Kristen is able to eat a little more these days, now that she's doing double duty in a new Off-Broadway musical at Manhattan's Princess Theatre entitled Fearless Frank. The show is based on the book My Life and Loves by Irish journalist Frank Harris, which was banned in England.

The cast is small, four girls and four men, with everyone tripling on roles, allowing for many flashback sequences. Kristen is playing Harris' wife Nellie; an American girl Laura, with whom he fell in love and wanted to marry; and Kate, an enchanting girl from Kansas City. All these different characterizations are a challenge for Kristen, what with the dance combinations and the music, notwithstanding a new soap script everyday.

However, this resourceful actress is not one to let any situation get the better of her. When she first arrived at One Life to Live she didn't particularly like her character, Mimi.

"She was too one-dimensional," Kristen said, "and I was afraid that people would say 'get her off the screen.'"

So Kristen started reading a vulnerability into Mimi that the writers were soon able to develop.

Mimi has since grown tremendously to the point where she can now tell Asa off, has chosen to see a psychiatrist, and will be going to college. According to Kristen, Mimi's discovered that she has more to offer than just her body. She's beginning to step out on her own.

Kristen Meadows . . . as Mimi King

Stepping out is something Kristen, who at 23 has an enormous amount of experience from many musical comedies, nightclub acts, commercials, and now TV, has been doing for a long time.

Channel Chatter: Veteran performer Henderson Forsythe (Dr. David Stewart on As the World Turns) will be starring in the new feature film Crisis at Central High, which is currently in production. The film also stars Joanne Woodward...

Maeve Kinkead, a long-time cast-member (Angie Frame) of Another World, has now joined Guiding Light in the role of Vanessa Chamberlain...

Soap Reruns: Starting June 12, Ryan's Hope will be showing clips from four years ago when Kate Mulgrew was Mary Ryan Fenelli, as Jack relives his fondest memories. Kate was so popular in the role that the producers couldn't keep her old tapes under wraps — how's that for a first.

Plor Portents: Marital problems loom over Don and Marlena after the sudden death of little Donnie on Days of Our Lives. Meanwhile, Jarvis and Chandler manipulate Alex Marshall.

Jill discovers an ally in John Abbott on The Young and the Restless, while Peggy makes a play for Steve and Derek moves ahead in the Chancellor business.

Tom takes a trip to Sweden on As the World Turns, where he plans to do a little investigating of his own. Meanwhile, a stranger continues to focus on the activities of James and Barbara.

Faith and Frank have cause to celebrate on Ryan's Hope. Also, Seneca tries again to help Kim, and Barry wears two faces.

Palmer jeopardizes Nina's future to get his own way on All My Children. Meanwhile, Nancy is confused about her feelings and Linc takes a chance on Langley.

Brad's volatile temper flares once again on One Life to Live. Mario's dream becomes a reality and Karen and Larry take the time to learn new things about each other.

Calvin and Deborah notice a change has come over Logan since his close friendship with April on The Edge of Night. Also, it seems apparent that Geraldine has something for Kelly to do.

The Manitoba Court of Appeal has cut in half the one-year jail term given a Yugoslavian immigrant who stole a screwdriver and $7 worth of pencils in the hope of being deported home. The sentence was imposed in March after Alex Stern, 30, pleaded guilty to break, enter and theft. Stern testified at the time it was the ninth crime he had committed in order to be deported since entering Canada in 1970. He fled Yugoslavia 13 years ago and Yugoslav authorities have since refused to furnish him with the necessary documents to return.

The U.S. Social Security Administration pays "Son of Sam" killer David Berkowitz as much as $300 a month while he serves a 315-year sentence in Attica state prison. The New York Daily News says the payments are made because Berkowitz, 27, is considered disabled by mental illness and unable to work.

Dear Abby:

My wife and I decided to have our breakfast and read the paper out-of-doors on our patio. In your column that day was a letter from Irene Cupido, an animal welfare worker. She stated that dogs usually bark to convey some kind of message: They are either hungry, frightened, cold, lonely or in some kind of trouble.

Meanwhile, our breakfast was ruined by the loud and constant barking of dogs in the adjoining backyards. This has been a continuing problem in our block with seven barking dogs who never seem to let up.

Why must we suffer this annoyance because seven dog owners choose to neglect the pets they have imprisoned in their yards?

Kenneth Maricle

Dear Mr. Maricle:

Has the Richmond Police Department heard about this? Disturb their peace until yours has been restored?

Dear Abby:

Who says travel is no fun when you're widowed? I happen to have a living husband, but I travel alone because Sidney hates to travel and I love it.

Once I talked Sidney into taking a short cruise with me. What a mistake! He drank excessively and hates to dance. I'd rather dance than eat.

I enjoy traveling alone because there are always a lot of single ladies to chat with. Also, gentlemen ask me to dance because I'm unescorted.

At home we get along very well, but Sidney is a drag on a trip. He complains constantly about missing his waterbed, his routine and his friends. Sidney stays home — gladly — and I go without him.

It's Better Alone

Dear Better:

You're lucky. Most husbands who hate to travel also hate to let their wives travel alone.

Dear Abby:

I never dreamed I would be writing a Dear Abby letter, but here I am.

I am an attractive widow who has fallen in love with a wonderful widower. We discussed marriage and any possible sex hang-ups that could present problems.

As it turns out, he likes breasts with nipples, and I don't have any. You see, I was born with "inverted nipples." (They are there, but turned inward.)

Can a problem like this be solved at my age? (I am 60.) It didn't bother my first husband but I don't want to lose this one as my second.

Worried in Idaho

Dear Worried:

Your problem is not as unusual as you think it is. Fortunately inverted nipples can be corrected surgically. It is a relatively simple procedure and can be done under local anesthesia. Your family physician can refer you to a specialist.

Akiyama coming to Royal

Maestro Kazuyoshi Akiyama . . . working on province-wide image for VSO

By AUDREY JOHNSON

An important goal for Maestro Kazuyoshi Akiyama is to have the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra better known throughout B.C.

"We feel the VSO should be a resource for the entire province", Akiyama says.

Amid a flurry of well-planned preparations the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra is about to appear in B.C.'s capital city for the first time in more than 30 years.

When the 90-member orchestra arrives in Victoria next Friday it will be making the last stop in a provincial tour that started in Prince George and has taken in several northern B.C. towns and five island centres.

If anyone connected with the VSO is superstitious, the fact that Friday also happens to be June 13, may cause a little apprehension among the ranks.

Repetition might be expected of such incidents as:

(a) Maestro Kazuyoshi Akiyama emerging from his dressing room impeccably attired except for brown shoes — his formal black ones having been left behind in the hotel.

(b) The entire battery of percussion instruments failing to arrive in time for the concert.

(c) Someone being stricken with an illness or losing their luggage.

All these things have happened at one time or another; and all have been resolved without the audience becoming aware that anything had gone amiss, thanks to the expertise and resourcefulness of the 10 administrative staff members who travel with the orchestra.

Principally responsible for staging the tour concerts is Doug Kent. Longtime devotees of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra may remember that Douglas Kent played first horn with that ensemble in early days.

Kent masterminded the Vancouver Symphony's itineraries for trips through the western U.S., the 1976 cross-Canada and B.C. trips and its 1974 excursion to Japan.

Kent's first objective as tour organizer is the avoidance of any possibility of being taken by surprise.

"I go to all the places we're playing, look at every facility, restaurant and hotel, check distances between points and establish all the timing of arrivals and departures," he says.

Probably the most travelled member of the orchestra however, is the maestro.

Akiyama, in addition to his position with the VSO, is permanent conductor of the Tokyo Symphony and principal guest conductor of the Osaka Philharmonic and the American Symphony Orchestra. He also makes guest appearances around the world.

Akiyama will begin his eighth season with the Vancouver Symphony this fall. He came to Vancouver in 1972 because his preference was for an an orchestra that still had room for growth rather than one that was already polished to a high degree.

But Akiyama is not likely to leave Vancouver in the near future, seeking new challenges. He has become inured to the lifestyle and an enthusiastic Canadian.

"Culturally, Canada is the fastest-growing country in the world," he comments.

He also loves to ski. So he takes two-fold joy in the beauty of his west coast home just under the Grouse Mountain ski-lift. He and his family — wife and three children — also own a condominium at Whistler.

The maestro says he finds skiing an ideal escape from the stress of his demanding career. "I'm very content just to be up there, skiing in my own easy-going way."

It doesn't bother him to have his children fly past him down the mountain yelling "slowpoke!"

Akiyama has advice for people who like to ski to music. He suggests a Viennese waltz. "That's the best rhythm for intermediate skiers; but if you are good, try a polka."

His taste in music is diversified. He listens to both jazz and rock and occasionally unwinds after a concert by going to a disco club.

The VSO is celebrating its 60th anniversary this season and is proud of having more than 40,000 subscribers — the largest subscription audience of any orchestra in the world. Last season the VSO enjoyed a paid attendance of more than 300,000 persons.

But as practicallly everyone knows by now, sold out concerts do not guarantee financial success for such a complex organization as a symphony orchestra.

Government and corporate sponsorship play an equally important role.

For many years a total absence of government touring grants and corporate support has limited the Vancouver Symphony to local performance.

But recently there has been an increased awareness of the benefits of touring on the part of funding agencies. A $100,000 grant from the B.C.lotteries fund has helped to cover the current tour which is part of the government's Funfest '80 activities.

In addition corporate sponsors have assisted: Prince George Pulp and Paper, Alcan Smelters and Chemicals, Eurocan Pulp and Paper, Canadian Cellulose, MacMillan Bloedel, and in Victoria the Yorkshire Trust Company.

Vancouver Symphony Society managing director Michael Allerton believes touring is an important part of the VSO's responsibilities. "As an institution which receives provincial support we should visit all of B.C. at least once every three or four years," he says.

He hopes that no one in Victoria will get the idea that his organization is in any way promoting competition with the Victoria Symphony.

"We certainly have no intention of disturbing the status quo for the Victoria Symphony," he says.

And he echoes Victoria Symphony's Bob McGifford when he says that the two organizations will both be touring the province as funding permits — "working together to co-ordinate our travelling dates and itineraries."

The VSO's Victoria concert takes place at the Royal Theatre and will present a a program consisting of Rimsky-Korsakov's Russian Easter Overture, Mozart's Eine Kleine Nachtmusik, Moussorgsky's Night On Bald Mountain and the Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 4 in F minor, Op. 36.

Curtains for Allen – or maybe not?

By AUDREY JOHNSON

A man who has had a closer yet more diverse look at the arts in this city than most, is calling it quits for a while.

Allen Houghton, a journalist by background, a business manager more or less by accident and an impressario by choice, is closing the curtain on his Victoria ventures for the time being.

But maybe not for good.

"I'm leaving options open," he says, "but I want to take a while out to consider the whole scene and find a focus for the next phase of my life."

Allen was the owner of a weekly newspaper in Ingersoll, Ont. when he and his wife, Joyce, paid a visit to Victoria and fell in love with the city.

They came here in 1972 and almost immediately Houghton landed at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria as business administrator.

A three-year contract with Bastion Theatre in a similar capacity followed and then four years ago, following the urge to get back into his own business, Houghton bought the impressario organization that had been founded by John Minshall.

"In the eight years I've spent in this city I've seen a lot of good things happen," he says. "There's been a lot of growth culturally — growth that is slowed now because of the general recession. I just hope too much is not permitted to disappear. I'm especially sorry to see the Spectrum Dance Theatre go under. I had some hopes that there was a chance for establishing Victoria's first dance company."

At the moment the climate is not good for the impressario, says Houghton. "Costs are fast rising and the difficulties are increasing — United States agencies insist on being paid in U.S. funds for instance. The availability of acts is increasingly scarce. There are fewer first class international companies on tour; and then there is the time-cost problem of getting to Victoria from the mainland."

If Houghton should get back into the impressario business he says about 50 per cent of what he would present would be Canadian.

Houghton says big U.S. names, such as Belafonte — "I've been trying to get him for years " — don't need a local impressario. They sell themselves. But they often won't come for a single performance; or the auditorium has to be large enough to make a single performance profitable.

Houghton

An impressario does a lot of horse trading, Houghton comments. "It's a matter of how badly do they want to play in your city; what financial terms do they want — a straight fee? a percentage? Each party makes a statement and finally reaches an agreement. But there are no bench marks to measure proceedings.

"You win some, you lose some. If two or three attractions out of a dozen or so in a season are money makers you're doing well. Sometimes you bring in a loss-leader for the prestige effect it has on the season as a whole. But the situation at the present time is pretty dicey."

Still, all this doesn't meant that the flow of incoming attractions is entirely drying up.

"Things are going to continue coming to the city and, I hope, good things," says Houghton.

"But I am more concerned with what exists in Victoria. I certainly would like to see the governments bail out organizations that have proved their value, such as the symphony."

But Houghton would add a string or two — "as much for the sake of the organization as the funding agency."

The bail-out, possibly through Loto Canada unclaimed millions, should carry a warning that such an action would not occur again. Houghton says he blames government funding agencies for not acting before an organization's crisis becomes extreme

"The government agency has all the facts, up-dated annually. It should be prepared to step in and call a halt . . ."

Memory of heart attack often cripples

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

My husband had a heart attack three years ago. Since then he has completely recovered, except for one thing. He still is scared to death to do anything active, even though the doctor assured him he can (and should) exercise. What more can we do to help him believe he is healthy?

Mrs. D.P.W.

Dear Mrs. W.:

A sudden heart attack can be a severe emotional blow to anyone, man or woman, at any age. It is not unusual for men who have recovered from an attack to continue to live with a feeling of trepidation, almost as if another attack is imminent and inevitable.

Have you noticed how often men who have had a heart attack, and recovered, refer to "the time I had my coronary"? This becomes a milestone in their lives and indicates to them their time of "reincarnation." It takes time, patience and understanding to help release them from the bondage of fear that seems to threaten so many "recovered coronaries."

In order to help your husband return to full serviceability in his home, in his work and in the community, it will take the coordinated efforts of you, your doctor, your family and even, at times, a psychologist or trained social worker.'

The task is a difficult one. And sometimes you, with great emotional exhaustion, may feel as if you're ready to give up all hope. You must persist. For without your support your husband may remain a lifelong emotional invalid.

Far too often the recovered coronary concentrates so completely on his own illness that he fails to recognize that his wife and family have paid an enormous toll during his illness.

Doctors are aware of post-coronary fears. As soon as their patients begin to show signs of recovery, they target them at early ambulation and, later, well-controlled exercise. And here is one of the most reassuring attitudes you can present to your husband: If his doctor felt that exercise and return to full activity in any way threatened his health or longevity, he would not have suggested it.

With gentle persuasion, your husband can be induced to take his rightful place in society, relieved of the fears that seem to dominate him at this time.

Speaking of your health . . . Special note should be made of the fact that when you sneeze you automatically close your eyes. Remember this. For when you are driving a car, the fraction of a moment that your eyes are closed is sufficient time to cause a severe accident.

Valve causes racing

Dear Mike:

The engine in my 1973 Nova keeps racing after I take my foot off the gas. Instead of slowing down right away, the engine keeps running at the same speed for a few seconds and then drops off. This not only wastes fuel but is dangerous in my opinion. I've had the linkage and the carbueretor checked, and both have gotten a clean bill of health. What do I do Now?

Racing on

Dear Racing:

Check the gulp valve in your smog system. Sometimes if the vacuum to this valve is too strong, the engine races during deceleration.

Dear Mike:

I have a 1975 Chevrolet Caprice wagon. This vehicle has the clamshell tailgate, where the window and gate open and shut electrically. There are two switches on the dashboard — one of the glass portion and one for the metal part. Or you can also open and close them with a key out back. My problem involves the dashboard switches. Sometimes the switch that's supposed to raise the metal portion doesn't work. Other times it does work. The key switch works fine. Can you render a diagnosis?

Got the gate

Dear Got:

I'm sure you're aware that your automatic transmission selector has to be in "park" for the dash switch to work. If that's not the problem, though, I suspect the dashboard switch itself. Remove it and test the contacts that make the gate go up and down. Replace the switch if necessary.

Dear Mike: What can I do to keep the sunvisor from flopping down in my face whenever my car goes over a bump in the road? I'm forever pushing the visor back up.

Annoyed.

Dear Ann:

Some sunvisors have a screw adjustment up near the top so you can tighten it. With others, you simply have to replace the visor. Othertimes you can find a good, inexpensive replacement in a wreching yard.

Dear Mike:

About the fellow who was having trouble with his Monza's battery discharging for no apparent reason — I experienced the same problem. Since I'm a retired electronics technician, I was able to test my car's electrical system for current draw and found nothing wrong. When I took the car back to the dealer, he simply replaced the battery, no questions asked. It's a very cheap battery, and I assume the dealer has replaced a fair number.

Tech

Dear Tech:

Thanks for the information.

Feel free to send your automotive problems to Wheels care of Michael Lamm, Box 7607-B, Stockton, Calif. 95207. Not all questions can be answered personally, but those of broadest reader interest will appear in future columns.

volunteering

With the beginning of June many potential volunteers may be saying, "But do they need me now?" The answer is a definite "Yes!" Volunteers are needed for special events and summer programs as well as to replenish the ranks in regular programs who tend to lose volunteers during the summer months.

Volunteers are needed in programs that require a long-term commitment. In return, training which develops skills for the individual is provided. Two examples of such programs are:

NEED Crisis Line is looking for volunteers for its next initial training group starting in July. Volunteers need not have a background in communication skills. However, they should be able to listen caringly to callers without giving advice or making judgements. NEED offers an intensive initial and ongoing training program.

Victoria Association for the Care of the Dying is planning an initial training session for July. VACD volunteers visit a dying or grieving person and talk, read or write letters for them. These volunteers are an important source of emotional and practical support. Volunteers must go through 13 hours of initial training before being placed with a patient and advanced training sessions are held on a monthly basis for those who are volunteering. Training sessions emphasize the physiological and psychological aspects of dying and grieving and how volunteers can help.

Volunteers who would like to make a short-term commitment are also needed by Victoria organizations. Right now, a number of special events and summer programs are looking for volunteers. For example:

Students from Quebec will be attending the University of Victoria for 6 weeks from the beginning of July to mid-August. Volunteers are needed to invite a student to their home for a meal and a social visit. This will help with their spoken English and will acquaint them with Victoria families. Such visits may be repeated if volunteers are interested.

At the present time, two organizations have a special need for on-going clerical assistance:

A local organization focusing on 'the family' needs a secretary with a typing skill of at least 50 words per minute and a good command of English to work with the executive director in a co-operative partnership. This interesting, challenging job would focus on a wide range of organization activities. The volunteer would be involved in formulating ideas as well as performing a clerical function. The volunteer would need to have their own typewriter and would work at home on a flexible time schedule. There will eventually be an office to work at.

A community organization in the Sidney area is looking for volunteers to act as office receptionists and to provide general clerical assistance. Volunteers also fill requests for volunteer drivers and provide information to the public. Volunteers could choose to work a regular half-day shift once a week or could be available for holiday or sick relief.

The same organization also needs drivers to drive the elderly, handicapped and people with special needs to and from medical appointments and shopping and on pleasure outings. For those who are housebound or who have difficulty getting around, a volunteer driver is a friend indeed!

The requests for volunteers listed in today's column are a sample of the opportunities available to those who are interested in sharing their time, energy and talents with other Victorians. There are a wide variety of positions listed with the Victoria Volunteer Bureau and those interested in volunteering are encouraged to contact the bureau at 386-2269 for more information. The office is open Monday to Friday from 8:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Dear Dr. Powell:

I am a 14-year-old girl with an embarrassing problem. I have a lot of hair. I have hair on my arms, on my legs, and some on my lower back. But my greo'st worry is that I have a lot of hair on my upper thighs. In the summer, when I wear a bathing suit, I am afraid some of the hair will show. Do you know of any method to remove hair on the arms without it growing back?

Answer:

Excess hair, especially when it is dark, presents a problem to many women. They use many methods of either removing the hair temporarily or permanently bleaching it to make it less obvious. If your concern is confined to the hair on your upper thighs the answer probably is to shave the hair as required. Hair grows back, so the shaving must be done on a regular basis. There are also chemicals that will remove the hair temporarily. Neither shaving or using hair-removal lotions will affect the follicle from which the hair grows, so the procedure must be repeated every few days in the summer.

A process called waxing also removes the hair and has to be repeated less frequently. Waxing is done by a cosmetician and is fairly expensive. You should discuss this with your mother and your family doctor.

Dear Mr. Vichert:

I'm a 14-year-old girl who is very mature and good looking for my age. My friends are quite a bit older than me because I don't relate to any other people my age.

There is this guy sho is 19. I like him and I know he likes me a lot. But something is holding me back. He's a good person, but I'm attracted to others, and I don't think I'm ready to leave all my loyalties with one guy.

Also, I know my parents would not approve of me going out with a boy who is five years older. They wouldn't trust me, nor would they understand. I am keeping this boy waiting and I know it's not fair, but I'm not sure what move is best.

Answer:

I think you have made a very wise and sensible decision. The only problem so far is that you have not let the boy know you do not want to give all your loyalties to him. The reasons tht you state for not wanting to do this show that you have given how you feel a lot of thought and come to some conclusions that are not only good for you, but also indicate some thought and consideration for your parents. I would agree with you that it is important to have friends, and also agree with you that it may not be the right time to give all your loyalties to one guy.

Dear Dr. Levine:

I had a cat I loved dearly. I had her since she was born and she meant more to me than anything I owned.

After five years of joy with my pet, my brother suddenly finds he has asthma and is allergic to animals. So my parents took my cat and put her to sleep. I cried for weeks after and I'll never forgive or forget this incident five years ago.

Every few weeks I remember what happened. I am now almost 19 and yet every time I think of it I break down and cry alone. I still feel I must get even with my parents. Do you think I have an emotional problem?

Answer:

You are not the first one to discover that many people get as attached to pet animals as they do to human beings. Pets can be loving, loyal, playful, dependent and protective, among other things. After a close relationship for five years, to have our cat plucked from you, and (euphemistically) "put to sleep" mut truly have been painful.

It sounds like there was not much warning or opportunity to work through your loss and grief. Consequently you're still going thrugh a process of mourning, very much akin to what we experience when we lose a human loved one.

However, five years is a long time for you to be still plagued by sadness, remorse, resentment and thoughts of retribution directed at your parents. It seems to me that there may be more brewing here than meets the eye. At least this is a possibility. I may be wrong, but it might be worth your while to speak to a psychotherapist, to check out what is "normal" mourning, and what is related to some other issues.

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel including Marion Powell, physician; Graham Cotter, clergyman; Dr. Saul Levine, psychiatrist, and social worker Bruce Vichert.

Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria V8W 2N4. Readers wishing to talk with someone about their problems can call NEED at 386-6233.

Sewers are her routine

OTTAWA (CP) — The first time Yvonne Bissonnette went into a sanitary sewer she got sick.

Fortunately, the mother of two seldom has to go underground as an operator of the jet sewer-cleaning truck that makes Ottawa sewers clean and free-flowing.

Most of the time the hoses can be placed by just dropping them down the sewer, but when it's a smaller-sized sanitary sewer she has to climb down to place the pump.

The truck she drives, called The Hawk, is also an emergency vehicle.

"The emergency takes priority," she said. "We have to drop what we're doing if we get an emergency call."

Her 145-pound frame is not as strong as she'd like it to be.

"But I just operate the controls on the truck so I don't have to be that strong."

While slipping her body into the grimy and smelly sewer, blonde pigtails blowing in the wind, she talked about her hobbies of horseback riding and rollerskating.

Of her job, she said: "It's just a job for me, that's all."

DAVID FILIPCHUK, 23, of Brantford lets fly with his tennis ball during a game at the University of Western Ontario Wednesday. This was the second time Filipchuk, a second year student, has tried the sport since an accident a couple of years ago confined him to a wheelchair. David says wheeling around the court is a lot of fun — and even more exercise — and that he is soon going to install a seatbelt for more daring serves.

Hospice program pilot for Victoria

Pilot programs designed to help people with terminal illnesses and their family and friends will be established in Victoria and Vancouver, Health Minister Rafe Mair announced.

The hospice program will provide care for dying persons and support for their families as well as education programs for medical staff involved with them.

The term hospice is being used because it is the root of hospital, hotel and hospitality and best describes the attitude expected of health workers.

Although the Victoria program is just being developed it's expected to include an assessment of the community's needs, an inpatient centre where patients with terminal illnesses can seek short-term refuge, and educational programs for patients, families and medical staff.

"Our idea of support for persons with terminal disease and their families will not involve new buildings nor more elaborate technology," said Mair. "Hospice refers to an attitude of caring and supportive concern within a community."

The first phase of the program is expected to cost $300,000.

The idea was proposed by a group of concerned organizations including: Victoria General and Royal Jubilee hospitals, the cancer clinic, the Capital Regional District's Community Health Service, the Victoria Council of Churches, the Victoria Association for Care of the Dying, and the Victoria Medical Society.

The emphasis, said Ruthella Cooper, co-ordinator of the Victoria program, is to provide caring not curing for the terminally ill patient.

Teachers save a life

OTTAWA (CP) — The mother of a six-year-old kindergarten student says the two separate school teachers who saved the life of her son after he swallowed and choked on a marble are first-class heroes.

"I'm so grateful," said Nicole Hamilton. "They were cool-headed and handled it beautifully."

Lynne Cleroux-Charron and Lorraine Keyuk of St. Brigid Separate School worked quickly and dislodged the marble from the throat of young Colin in less than a minute.

Huntington's feeds on fear

By PAT DUFOUR

June is Huntington's Disease Month in Canada and local members of the Huntington Society of Canada are trying to reach and help and families who may be affected by it.

HD (also known as Huntington's Chorea) is a hereditary neurological disorder. Any child of an affected parent has a 50-50 possibility of escaping or inheriting it, depending entirely on whether that parent passes on a defective or a normal gene.

Although the absence or existence of the condition in the child is determined at the time of conception, the symptoms usually appear between the ages of 30 and 40 and, sometimes, much later in life.

A person with HD may die from other causes before reaching the age when the HD symptoms would otherwise have appeared. This delayed effect and the resulting uncertainty make it very difficult to determine whether there is any genetic risk in having children in families where HD has been identified in an earlier generation.

Another problem is that the symptoms — which may include twitching or muscular spasms, premature aging, personality changes, depression, irritability and carelessness—can easily be mistaken in the early stages for other physical, mental or emotional disorders, resulting in inadequate or inappropriate treatment.

Ignorance and fear ere HD's principal allies. It is entirely possible for patients to lead a satisfying and fairly normal life, provided they and their families receive adequate advice and help.

The Huntington Society of Canada was formed in 1974 in Ontario. While there is no Victoria chapter, the four or five local persons who are members hope through stories such as this to contact more families in order to help.

"The problem is that often some members of the family have not been told," one member says, "That's why we cannot use our names in print."

Approximately one person out of every 10,000 in North America has the defective HD gene and is either already showing the symptoms or will eventually do so.

Local society members would like to form a chapter for two reasons; one to help families who suspect their family may have a HD history and also raise funds for research that may, in time, lead to a cure.

They ask those that suspect they may have HD in the family to write the society. The address is:- 13 Water Street North, #3, Box 333, Cambridge (Galt), Ontario, N1R 5T8.

They also stress the importance of consulting a doctor.

Before the judge

A preliminary hearing scheduled to last two days was halted suddenly Thursday in provincial court and a 22-year-old city man pleaded guilty to armed robbery and possession of a firearm during a theft.

Marcel Victor Poupart, 2065 Goldsmith, was charged with the Dec. 5 holdup of the Saanich Peninsla Savings and Credit Union, 7103 West Saanich.

A total of $6,193 was taken in the noon holdup, but about half of it was lost when the shopping bag used to carry the loot broke inside the credit union. Poupart was arrested shortly after in a vehicle in front of Cordova Bay elementary school.

Defence lawyer Barry Mah Ming re-elected trial by magistrate and entered the guilty pleas on behalf of his client.

* * *

Two men charged with assault and possession of a prohibited weapon were denied bail by Judge Lorne Pearce.

Peter James Amell, 21, of 1204 Yates, and former-Victorian Zeljko Stubljar, 19, now of Calgary, were jointly charged with assault causing bodily harm to a 15-year-old who suffered a broken jaw and cuts Wednesday afternoon at Lambrick Park secondary school. They also were charged separately with possession of knives.

Both were remanded in custody until next Tuesday for election of trial method.

* * *

Two women charged jointly with a 30-year-old man with robbery were released on bail but ordered to obey 10 p.m. curfews.

Laila Marie Stewart, 18, of Campbell River, and Kelly Anne Sawa, 19, who gave police no fixed address, were charged with Kirby Martin Hawksworth, 1988 Kaltasin, after a 42-year-old Campbell River man was knocked down and robbed of $17 early Wednesday at Government and Yates.

All were remanded until June 16 for election and, in Hawksworth's case, possible bail hearing.

A 23-year-old man was ordered not to possess any firearms, explosives, or ammunition for five years after pleading guilty to possession of a weapon dangerous to the public peace.

Peter Alfred Emile Ladoucer, 803 Esquimalt, was given a suspended sentence and one year's probation by Pearce, who also ordered the confiscation of a .303-calibre rifle.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Ladoucer and his wife were at the Halfway House beer parlor May 8 and Ladoucer went home to check on a child. When he returned and saw his wife talking to a man, he escorted her out in a physical fashion and took her home. Mulligan said three males followed them to the house where an altercation took place and Ladoucer brandished the rifle, complete with bayonet and 11 live rounds of ammunition.

Defence lawyer Brian MacKenzie said Ladoucer and his wife had a discussion about the man concerned before Ladoucer went home to check on his child. He said Ladoucer was a marine engineer aboard HMCS Restigouche and was undertaking alcohol rehabilitation treatment and counselling through the Canadian Forces.

Elaine Dorothy Stentaford, 2587 Selwyn, was charged following a traffic accident about 5:30 p.m. Wednesday in the 500-block Gorge Road East where a westbound vehicle struck a tree.

Court was told Stentaford was on parole from the Twin Maples prison where she was serving a four-month term imposed April 17 this year for three drinking-driving convictions.

She was remanded until today for plea.

Jury to get pot case next week

Lawyers for the prosecution and defence completed their summations Thursday in the county court trial of eight men accused of importing 33½ tons of marijuana into Canada.

The case will go to the jury after Judge Montague Drake gives his address on Monday.

Defence lawyers Jeffrey Green of Victoria and William Deverell, Josiah Wood, Sidney Simons and Thomas Rafael, all of Vancouver, and Crown counsel Gordon Macdonald, assisted by Martha McNeely, began their summations Tuesday.

The trial opened two months ago and has occupied 27 court days, a record for a criminal trial in Victoria.

The men are also accused of possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking. They are:

William Francis Perka, 35, of Port Townsend, Wash.; Paul Oscar Nelson, 27, Seattle and Marina del Rey, Calif.; William Terry Hines, 39, San Rafael, Calif.; Michael Walter Butler, 28, Westport, Wash.; Stephen Earl Johnson, 34, Port Townsend; Jaime Marin, 38, Marina del Rey; Albergipson Frasser-Afanador, 39, Los Angeles; and Marco Antonio Lopera Penagos, 60, Mellin, Colombia.

They were arrested after the seizure May 22, 1979, of the Panamanian freighter Samarkanda at the head of Sydney Inlet, 50 kilometres northwest of Tofino, in a combined armed forces-RCMP raid.

Sentence June 19 in trafficking case

An Esquimalt couple and a Sooke man will be sentenced in county court June 19 for possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking.

Judge Peter Millward Thursday found Alfred Grant Cooley, 39, of Sooke, and Gail Anne McLeod, 26, and John Alexander McLeod, 28, both of Esquimalt, to be in possession of heroin on May 29, 1978.

After the finding, the McLeods pleaded guilty to the full offence of possession for the purpose of trafficking. Cooley was found guilty of the full offence.

A stay of proceedings was entered for Gail Anne McLeod on a charge of importing heroin between May 9 and May 30, 1978.

'Close to Christmas and I needed the money'

A 45-year-old Esquimalt man told a B.C. Supreme Court jury Thursday he struck a patient in Victoria General Hospital Dec. 23 with a Christmas-wrapped piece of pipe after being attacked himself.

Charges against William Richard Johnson, 34, resulted in a directed verdict of not guilty after Mr. Justice Gordon MacKinnon ruled there was no evidence upon which he could be convicted.

The case was to go to the jury today after MacKinnon's address. Crown counsel Nicholas Lott and defence counsel Douglas Christie gave their summations Thursday.

Christie said he, Langer and Johnson were drinking all day Dec. 23. He had planned to see a family friend who had just had a baby at the hospital. He also received a telephone call saying Adams, to whom he had loaned $40 a week or 10 days previously, was in the same hospital.

"It was close to Christmas and I needed the money," said Christie.

He asked Adams for the money and was refused. Then, he said, Adams took a swipe at him "with a bat or whatever it was" which was produced from under the pillow and sheets.

Christie said he was struck by the object, got it away from Adams and hit him probably three times. He denied carrying a long tubular parcel into the hospital.

Asked why he left the hospital with the object, which he dumped in a parking lot, he said "I certainly wasn't going to give it back for him to give it to me again."

He admitted to a criminal record between 1953 and 1975 involving 10 offences including three common assaults, assaulting and obstructing a policeman, carrying a concealed weapon and robbery with violence.

Langer said she had a Christmas-wrapped box of chocolates and a pair of baby pajamas for Sharon Zarelli, 23. Zarelli testified she had known Christie about 12 years, had expected a visit from him, and had given birth at VGH Dec. 21.

Langer said she, Christie and Johnson went to VGH. Christie was carrying the two presents and gave them to her saying he wanted to see someone.

Suddenly everyone was shouting. She said she didn't know what it was about, couldn't find Christie or Johnson, and left the hospital and sat in a car.

Langer said they knew Zarelli was on the fourth floor (Adams was on the second floor) but she didn't know where she was in the hospital because she was drunk.

Asked what happened to the two presents she described, she said she ate the chocolates. Then she produced the pajamas, in Christmas wrapping, which she said she hadn't given to Zarelli because she was charged with attempted murder and was too upset.

Langer admitted she was not charged until Dec. 28. Asked why she hadn't given the present before that, she said: "Bill was in jail, I was upset, then I was charged."

Commissionaire Douglas Sutherland said he followed Christie from the hospital to Douglas Street at a walking pace where a police car stopped and took Christie into custody.

The policeman in the cruiser, Constable Robert Barron, said he put Christie into the car and took him to the station. He said Christie did not appear intoxicated.

James Gerald Hubbard, 35, said he was watching television when Christie, Langer and Johnson came over for a drink around 5:30 p.m. (The incident in the hospital occurred, according to several witnesses, about 6:30 p.m.).

He said Christie was very drunk and couldn't talk much.

Murder verdict in stabbing

NANAIMO (CP) — Dean Thomas Langford, 25, of Campbell River, was found guilty Thursday of second-degree murder in the July 6, 1979, stabbing of Helena Rose Howard, 16, and guilty of manslaughter in the stabbing the same day of Christina Beatrice Thomas, 26.

The second-degree murder verdict carries an automatic life sentence with no parole for at least 10 years.

The B.C. Supreme Court jury, which deliberated 6½ hours, recommended no parole for at least 15 years.

Mr. Justice Howard Callaghan was to pass sentence today.

The four-day trial heard testimony that Langford admitted stabbing the two Gold River women on a logging road near the town after picking them up hitchhiking.

Trade licence fee change proposed

City council's finance committee Thursday endorsed a proposal to alter the method of levying business taxes and trade licence fees.

The change will generate the extra revenue needed to finance future deficits of the waterfront convention centre.

If council approves next week, starting in 1981 businesses operating in the city will no longer be able to deduct their trade licence fee from their business taxes.

Comptroller Mason Sheldrick said the change would increase city revenues by $272,000 based on 1979 statistics.

The city is committed to paying up to $200,000 a year to cover a half-share of any deficits incurred by the centre.

He also said the change will probably affect mostly professionals — lawyers, accountants, doctors — who have paid a flat $100 trade licence for 30 years.

Businessmen now pay fees ranging up to $1,200 a year for a trade licence. If they have premises within the city, they also pay four per cent of their rent as a business tax.

Committee chairman Ald. Frank Carson said the new method is fairer than the Chamber of Commerce's plan for a 25-percent increase in the business tax only.

He said it will spread the cost of financing the convention centre deficit over the whole business community.

Committee is neutral to airline proposal

A proposal for a new Victoria-Vancouver commuter airline received the limited endorsement of city council's downtown economic development committee.

Aldermen Ron McKenzie and Robin Blencoe said they supported Coastal Commuter Air's plans for airport-to-airport service.

But the committee held back and passed a motion saying only it had no objection to Coastal's application for a licence, which has been council's stand on similar requests in the past.

Erik Andersen, president of the new company, plans to serve the two cities by Twin Otter with a fare of about $30, substantially lower than the existing fares charged by Air Canada and Pacific Western Airlines or the harbor float plane service offered by Airwest.

Meanwhile aldermen voted Thursday to ask for more information on the scheduling pileup in the Inner Harbor with several ferries and float planes converging in a 45-minute period each evening.

Members of Victoria city council's emergency measures committee said they shared the concerns of Ald. Robin Blencoe, who raised the matter last week.

Victoria to prepare for disaster

Victoria will take a renewed interest in emergency planning following endorsement Thursday of a report from Ald. Robin Blencoe, who last month attended a national conference on the subject.

The members of Blencoe's emergency measures committee of council voted to update the city's emergency plan, in light of the recent Mississauga train wreck that spewed chlorine gas over the Toronto suburb.

Aldermen also decided to establish in the lobby of city hall a public information display on emergencies.

Pamphlets will be available to citizens on how to handle certain emergencies such as earthquakes, winter power failures and severe storms.

Blencoe said the conference in Arnprior, Ont. studied both peacetime disasters and those created in time of war and stressed the importance of each municipality preparing a local contingency plan.

Canada has much to do in civil defence planning for a possible war, Blencoe said. While the prime responsibility is the federal government's a municipality can fill a major role.

UVic senate votes to assist centre

Members of the University of Victoria senate have agreed to take over academic program development at David Thompson University Centre in Nelson provided there is adequate funding from the province.

Selkirk Community College asked the education ministry in April to be relieved of the responsibility for managing the centre, formerly Notre Dame University.

David Thompson offers a number of UVic programs and UVic was asked to assume the managment role.

UVic President Dr. Howard Petch said Education Minister Brian Smith should be told that if UVic is to assume an expanded role at DTUC, it should have designated funding.

"It is extremely difficult for us to plan properly and difficult for students to make their plans without such notice of funding," Petch said.

Dr. Reg Mitchell said he opposes the move as a UVic senator and a taxpayer.

He said government funds would be better spent on building residences for out-of-town students on the UVic campus.

"Attending university has a tremendous effect on the maturity of students by getting them away from home to a campus setting," Mitchell said.

Scholarly link-up with Shanghai seen

The University of Victoria moved closer to becoming the first Canadian university to gain direct access to a Chinese university's research facilities.

Members of the UVic senate approved an arrangement proposed in 1978 by a Chinese delegation to create a formal relationship between UVic and Shanghai Normal University.

The Chinese university is similar in size to UVic with more than 1.5 million books and volumes of periodicals.

Dr. Jan Walls, director of the Centre for Pacific and Oriental Studies at UVic, said the prospect of student access to a Chinese university is exciting, particularly since Shanghai is the largest city in the world in a country containing one-quarter of humanity.

UVic president Dr. Howard Petch said the idea would be for the two universities to exchange published material and to assist in an exchange of scholars and students for educational travel, studies, lectures and joint research.

Walls said Shanghai Normal, established in 1951, is an elite institution with a high reputation.

He predicted the twinning arrangement will make a big impression in China where new interest has recently been shown toward the West, particularly in science and technology.

The agreement will open up new channels and create important contacts without the necessity of spending educational funds.

Petch said it would be appropriate to set up a scholarship for a Chinese student to study here and to bestow an honorary degree on a distinguished Chinese citizen.

Character is often used to describe older homes with charm — but somehow it seems to be insufficient to describe the attributes of this home opposite Windsor Park in Oak Bay. Designed by Samuel McClure as a 3 bedroom cottage it shows all the ear marks of his style, fir floors, wooded sash bay windws, panelling in original shape, 2 fireplaces, one in the master beams and much, more. If you're looking for a home that just feels right — that has more than character and more than charm, drop by this weekend. $130,000.

308 CARDS OF THANKS

MARGARET, JULIE AND RIchard Chamberlain would like to thank Dr. Burns Morrison, Dr. Martin and all the nurses at the Jubilee Hospital for the care they gave Geoff during his illness.

We would like to thank all our friends, Life Underwriters, square dance Promenaders and Dogwood trailer club members for all their help, support and sympathy during this very sad time of our lives.

Our thanks also to the Rev. John Davidson for delivering a wonderfully positive and uplifting memorial service for Geoff. God bless you all.

308 CARDS OF THANKS

IT IS WITH APPRECIATION and gratitude that we thank our many friends and relatives for the thoughtfulness and kindness expressed to us during our sadness of the loss of our loving husband and father, many cards and letters were of special comfort. Particular thanks also to those who joined us for the after service reunion of friends and family.

Win Pearson, Noni, Susan and Joanne.

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the acts of kindness, messages of sympathy and beautiful floral offerings received from our many friends and relatives in the loss of our beloved husband and father Ido Corietto who passed away suddenly on May 21, 1980. Thanks to Dr. J.M. Bell and Dr. Bennett and staff at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

THE WIFE AND FAMILY OF Jack Surtees would like to thank their many friends and relatives for their kindness and sympathy and thoughtful cards and letters received during the loss of a wonderful husband and Dad. A special thanks to Rev. Dr. A.E. King.

Jean Surtees and family.

309 IN MEMORIAM

JACOBSEN- In loving memory of Robert Bruce beloved son and brother who passed away June 6, 1973.

He is gone but not forgotten
And, as dawns another year
In our lonely hours of thinking,
Thoughts of him are always near.
Mom and Dad, brothers and sister.

SMITH — In loving memory of Kenneth David, passed away June 5, 1978.

Nothing can ever take away,
The love a heart holds dear.
Fond memories linger every day,
Remembrance keeps him near.
Ivy, Gail, Margaret.

ICBC firm on rebates

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Insurance Corp. of B.C. is holding to its decision to eliminate rebates for drivers who have taken driver training courses, despite a coroner's jury recommendation, a corporation spokesman said Thursday.

The Kelowna jury, investigating the death of a 15-year-old who fell off the hood of a moving car, said driver education should be mandatory in high schools and the $50-rebates ICBC had given should be increased.

But corporation spokesman Bob Egby said trained drivers pick up bad habits and a few years after leaving driver education are no better than untrained drivers. He noted that the rebates were costing the corporation almost $500,000 a year.

Population rises

BONN (Reuter) — West Germany's population rose for the first time in six years in 1979 to total 61,439,000, the federal statistics office said Tuesday. The increase of 118,000 was due to rising numbers of immigrants, who account for about seven per cent of the population.

Summer care for peonies

Next year's peony blooms depend on the care given the plants from now until the end of September.

Even now as the early red and pink doubles are coming into bloom, the plants may need a deep watering to enable all flowers to open.

We see poor foliage and half opened buds where the gardener thinks watering is needed only in hot weather, not realizing that cool days with infrequent sprinkles of rain contribute very little to the soil moisture. There are other causes of blooms failing to open, but frequently lack of water can be traced as a cause.

As each flower begins to drop petals, cut off the seedpod which can easily be seen forming. This is no great job for there may be only a dozen or so to each plant. Seeding drains plant energy.

With later varieties coming in time for summer shows, the art of disbudding can be tried to produce one larger and more perfect flower to a stem. Rub out the side buds on the same stem, leaving only the top main bud.

If later blooms are wanted, rubbing out the top main bud will develop the smaller side buds 10 to 14 days later. This system prolongs flowering season and gives more blooms.

With each peony variety as flowering ceases, a feeding is given to assist storage of food in the thick underground tubers. Since peonies are famous for living in the same position indefinitely (50 years has been recorded) this annual feeding is a real necessity in our heavy winter rainfall area if full value of the plants is to be realized each year.

After flowering, spread a quarter cup of balanced fertilizer such as 6-8-6 around each large plant after watering well.

Scratch the soil with a hand fork or cultivator, being careful not to go deep enough to damage roots; water again to take the fertilizer down. Subsequent summer waterings will continue to wash the fertilizer within reach of the roots and at the same time keep the foliage looking very handsome in the summer garden. Good foliage is a necessity to the conversion of fertilizer into plant food.

Peonies of later blooming varieties may be either single or double and in lovely shades of pink as well as pure white and the shining dark turkey red. Japanese varieties have enormous flowers of a crinkled texture delightful for using in ones and twos for large summer indoor arrangements.

Not only the flowers are different but the leaves are not so densely green as the more usual earlies. By late summer, if the plants are kept watered throughout the season, the leaves assume lovely hues of brown, with rosy tints.

All this color is at its best by late August into September and by that time may be cut sparingly to use with late summer garden flowers in home arrangements and in fall flower shows.

When all foliage has become limp and useless, usually towards the end of September, peony leaves must be cut off and taken away to prevent chance of fungus diseases at the root crown. At the same time give a handful of bonemeal around each plant.

Bonemeal is a slowly acting fertilizer which will be useful to peony roots which are activated very early in spring. Winter rains will wash the meal down into the soil.

Poor flowering of peonies can usually be traced to lack of care from May until September. Don't let this be the preventable cause in your garden.

Munro to settle BCR manning

Prominent labor leader Jack Munro has been appointed to a two-member fact-finding committee established to bring in recommendations on crew requirements for B.C. Railway trains, Labor Minister Jack Heinrich said Thursday.

Also appointed to the committee, which is to report its findings by Sept. 30, is John Spicer, recently retired executive vice-president of Canadian National Railways. Munro is the western region president for the International Woodworkers of America.

Establishment of the committee was agreed to when the seven-union Joint Council of Railway Unions settled its bitter five-week strike against B.C. Rail in January.

The contentious issue of train manning — the Crown-owned railway wants to reduce crew sizes to two men from three — was shelved pending the recommendations of the fact-finding committee, and the two sides quickly settled on other aspects of the 30-month contract.

The United Transportation Union, which represents trainmen at B.C. Rail, had said it would not consent to a crew reduction until the railway proved that it could be done safely.

Crews were reduced in 1978 on CP Rail and the CNR, but the union maintains that B.C. Rail, with its steeper grades and sharper curves, requires the third trainman for safety.

Special branch for A-G

A special projects branch will be set up as part of a new approach to criminal justice in B.C., Attorney-General Allan Williams told the John Howard Society Thursday.

Addressing the Vancouver Island group's 45th annual meeting, Williams said the branch will include projects which do not otherwise fit his ministry.

They include Counterattack, directed at drinking drivers, the diversion of minor offenders through informal, non-court procedures, non-police crime prevention and methods of relating to such agencies as John Howard.

"We need a window, or better still, a door to receive worthwhile ideas which enter the ministry to enable them to become a full part of the administration of justice in this province," Williams said.

The branch will administer provincial funds contributing to the work of community agencies serving criminal justice and act as a focus for involving the community.

Retiring John Howard president Keith Jobson said the government's shift from centralized administration to small local groups should help in working with offenders.

He said there should be an increased effort to secure relationships with crown prosecutors and the judiciary to support the diversion program.

And a full-time employee of the society is needed to conduct a public education program, he said, suggesting that the Council of Churches should become involved.

Victorian again leads child fund

Heather Siska of 1076 Davie in Victoria was re-elected to the board of directors of the B.C. branch of the Save the Children Fund at the recent 60th annual meeting in Vancouver.

Victoria's representative for the past three years, Mrs. Siska is the only director from outside the Vancouver area.

Major boost slated for beef

The B.C. beef industry along with the provincial and federal governments has plans for a massive expansion program worth $100 million a year in increased sales and $40 million in direct provincial tax revenue.

The detailed plan is laid out in a report that took almost six years to prepare.

The report, the work of government staff, outside consultants and beef industry leaders, bases huge projected financial benefits for the industry on increasing B.C.'s beef cattle numbers between 35 per cent and 40 per cent during the next seven years.

In addition, the financial success is closely tied to ending the increasingly costly process of exporting from B.C. 100,000 head a year of beef calves and yearlings to other provinces where they are fattened for market, slaughtered and then returned to B.C. for consumers.

The key is to upgrade large areas of B.C.'s more than 20 million acres of grazing lands, increase forage and silage production of private lands to feed the cattle to market weights in B.C.

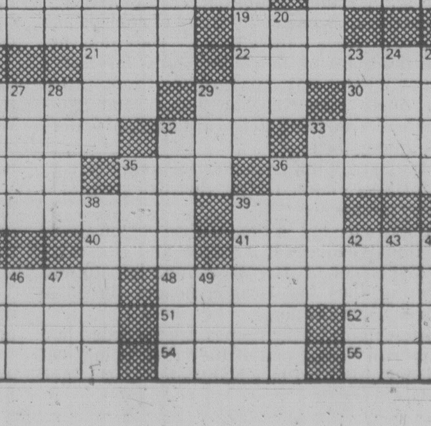
Answer to yesterday's puzzle.



Bennett betrayed us, Kettle lovers charge

By VIC PARSONS

KELOWNA (CP) — Railway buffs and tourism boosters in Premier Bill Bennett's home riding are building an angry head of steam over what they see as the government's betrayal of their fight to preserve a 70-year-old railway that helped open up the Okanagan Valley.

Accusing Bennett's government of political double-talk and bureaucratic incompetence, proponents of the attempt to save a 92-kilometre section of the Kettle Valley Railway are taking a last-minute stand to defend what they consider an irreplaceable part of British Columbia's heritage.

But hopes of the 2,000-member Kettle Valley Railway Heritage Society are dimming as CP Rail, which owns the line but has not used it since 1973, plans to start taking up the track in the next few weeks. The rails would be used to refurbish Prairie branch lines, a CP Rail spokesman says.

With the railway all but doomed, its supporters angrily recall they were told a year ago to sit back, be quiet and let the government save the day.

The protesters present another aggravation that Bennett, beset by a series of political embarrassments since he was re-elected to a second term last year, doesn't need.

It is the second problem on home turf for the premier this year. The first, a series of protests over uranium mining and development in the Kelowna area, was defused when Bennett announced a seven-year ban just days before some of his own constituents were to travel to Victoria to air their opposition.

This past week, after announcements that the provincial government would not spend money to save the track, Bennett's local constituency office was picketed for the second time this year.

Pat Capozzi, manager of a local hotel and a society spokesman, thinks the group has been treated shabbily by the government. He has hard words for Bennett.

"He's always on a soap box," Capozzi said. "He never talks to you as a normal person. We've thanked him for nothing."

Capozzi, grandson of Cap Capozzi, a bosom buddy of the current premier's late father W. A. C. Bennett, says the tearing up of the track suggests the Social Credit government has no commitment to history.

Myra Canyon, a 10-kilometre stretch of track near Kelowna that many consider the most spectacular section, has 16 wooden trestles, two tunnels and two high steel bridges. Andrew McCulloch, the railway's first chief engineer, commented when he first saw the canyon: "Never saw a railway built on any hillside as this."

Some members of the heritage society found it hard to believe when Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe sent them a Telex last week saying the ministry had not received a $42,000 feasibility study on the proposal that the government has paid for.

The study said the section between Penticton and McCulloch, near Kelowna, being considered for the scenic heritage railway is generally in poor condition and would need extensive improvement.

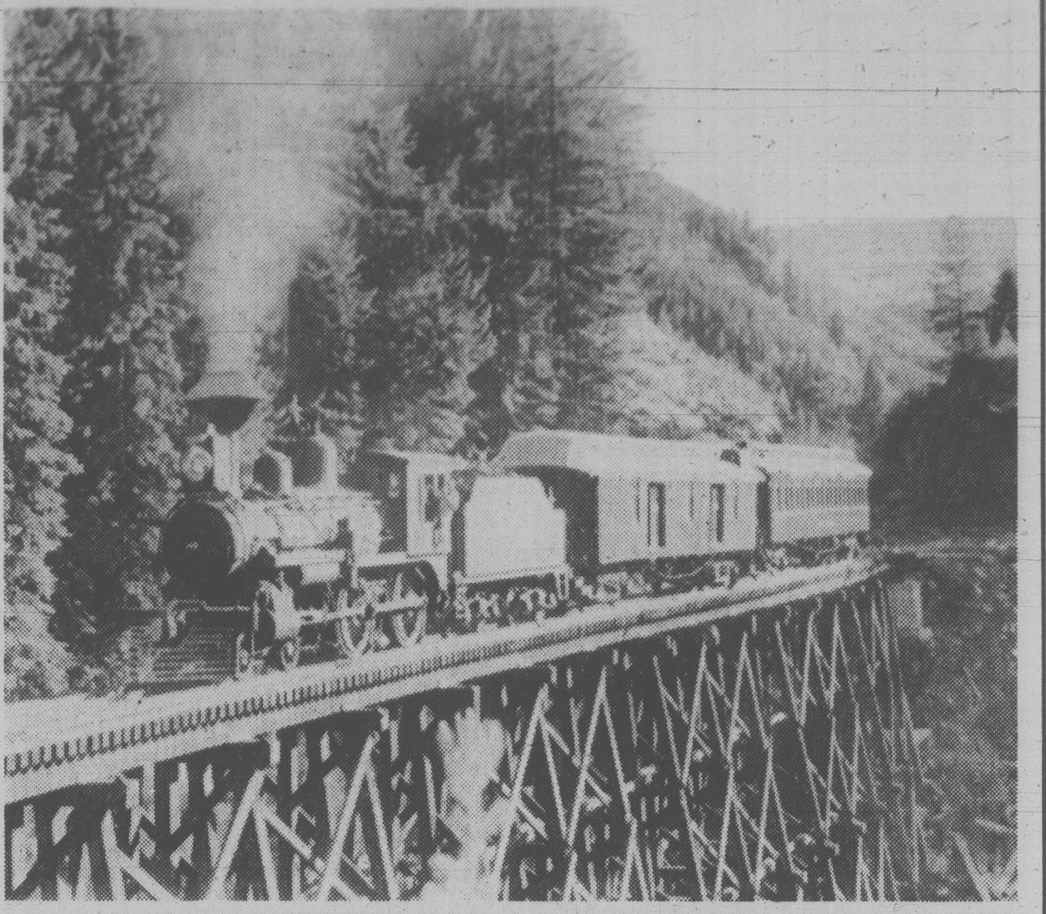
But it concluded that after an initial capital investment of $8 or $9 million in 1980 dollars and average annual operating or maintenance costs between $730,000 and $910,000, the railway would have a good chance of paying its way.

Keeping the railway would mean an annual payroll of $670,000, increased local business, more tourist spending, a modest repayment of capital on a percentage of annual profit and the preservation of a valuable historic site, the study said.

"A major attraction like the Kettle Valley scenic railroad could make a contribution to building the critical mass that will make the Okanagan a major destination, particularly for the tour industry."

Yet despite the figures in the study, Wolfe said preservation of the railway would cost $25 to $30 million for the 190-km section between Penticton and Midway. That trackage is more than twice what the society wants.

Instead, Wolfe told the legislature Tuesday, the government was negotiating with CP Rail to reclaim the right of way, without the tracks, and would be willing to lease the roadbed to a private group operating a tourist service for $1 a year.



The last trip over the Kettle Valley Railway before line was abandoned in 1973

The decision has provoked bitter criticism by members of the heritage society, who collected a 7,000-signature petition in the area backing preservation of the railway.

A society statement early in the week said there has been a complete lack of direction in the tourism ministry for 18 months; accuses Economic Development Minister Don Phillips of being confused or lacking in courage to say what he means; calls for a public accounting of "gross incompetence" in the provincial secretary ministry and singles out Bennett for special mention in doing nothing to preserve the railway.

"We were told to sit back and be quiet and everything would fall into place," says Georgie Brown, the society's secretary. "So when the bomb dropped we were in a state of shock."

Despite the drizzle, city's economy is sunny

By AL FORREST

Victoria businessmen are singing in the rain.

Retail sales are strong, convention spending is up, the tourist business is holding its own and loggers are working with no fears of an early fire season.

Hotel occupancy rates were high in May and early June, considering the gloomy weather, local Canada Employment Centre manager Wally Pickering said today.

Retail sales were better than in most North American cities with revenues up between 10 and 12 per cent over the same time last year.

Hotel and motel owners were a little surprised that tourist business has held up, despite the cloudy skies. Restaurants in particular did well.

Pickering said it is evident people who had planned to come to Victoria for an extended holiday decided to come, despite the weather.

Some day-trippers may have been scared off but overnight business was good.

Tourists were willing to take a chance the weather might improve, he said.

In addition, the Victoria economy was bolstered by the Swiftsure and eight important conventions in May plus the B.C. Real Estate Association convention at the beginning of June.

There will be 10 large conventions here this month and there will also be five stops by cruise ships.

There has been a significant increase in hiring in both the retail and tourist industries during the past month because of the surprising strength in both sectors, Pickering said.

"Several firms remarked that they were more than a little surprised at the amount of business this early and some were scrambling for extra staff."

A combination of wet weather and stable lumber markets has brought an improvement in the forest products industry.

Loggers were busy and there was no need to close the bush in mid-day as often occurs at this time of year because of a fire hazard.

With a good supply of logs, B.C. Forest Products is back on three full shifts in both its sawmill and plywood plant.

Victoria Plywood was operating on two full shifts plus some finishing and drying work on a third shift.

A city-wide study by information officer Dan Bowes shows the economy humming along nicely on other fronts as well, Pickering said.

Burrard Yarrows Corporation shipyard hired 25 additional employees in May, bringing its total to 750.

Oakland Fisheries hired 30 additional people in May and currently has 60 on the payroll. There may be some layoffs when present work is completed but hiring would begin again in July for the salmon season.

Farms thrived in the rain and 200 people were placed in local jobs during May. Additional workers are being sought this month, especially to help with the first hay crop.

There were 252 properties worth $18.6 million sold during May, down from 351 worth $24.7 million the previous May.

There were 580 listings during the month, down from 724.

Real estate spokesmen said many people appear to be waiting to see how low the mortgage interest rates will fall before making an offer to buy.

Construction activity remains steady but is still one of the weak spots in the local economy. There has been a moderate increase in house construction but industrial and commercial work continues at the 1979 level, which was rated as low.

Finlayson link stays closed

A road link between two shopping centres will not be completed this year as planned, Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier said Thursday.

The two-block construction project connecting Finlayson and North Dairy will be delayed because Victoria and one of the two shopping centres will not help pay drainage costs of extending the road, Couvelier said.

Saanich offered to pay for the extension, but needed Victoria and both centres to contribute toward drainage costs if the project was to go ahead this year.

One centre indicated an interest in the project, the other did not, Couvelier said.

Victoria refused a request it contribute less than $100,000 of the total $500,000 cost of the project, he said, and Saanich can't afford to pay for the entire project.

The cause of foliage damage to plants on Storries Beach near Campbell River has now been pinned down.

There was speculation the damage had been caused by a blight or chemicals but the environment ministry now says it was a natural reaction to a cold, dry blast of wind.

It will be July 6 before a decision will be made on a proposed housing development on 25 acres at Tsehum Harbor.

An application for development was made April 8 by Victoria businessman and alderman Bob Wright, whose company North Saanich Marina Ltd. owns the property.

A decision to reject or approve the application was to have been made by today.

However Ashby said he and Wright have agreed on a 30-day extension.

Wright said the delay was made at the request of North Saanich and he was delighted to comply.

At a recent public hearing residents made it clear they want council to declare the property a development area so council has some control over it.

By VIC PARSONS

VANCOUVER (CP) — What's in a name? Residents of Metchosin might well ponder the question.

Metchosin is one of a variety of curious and wonderful place names in B.C. They may not have the class of Newfoundland's Joe Batt's Arm or Witless Bay, but Nosebag Creek (after none other than Nosebag Jones) and Skookumchuck (meaning strong or turbulent water) rank among the best.

Where else but in the Cariboo region would one find Woodpecker, Dragon and Horsefly? The last is named after its summer infestations of biting flies but Dragon honors the local pioneer, Dick Dragon.

The origins of the names are recorded in a number of books, one of the latest being 1001 British Columbia Place Names by G. P. V. and Helen Akrigg.

A soap manufacturer might have paid a lot to name his product Kleena Kleene, after a truck stop on the road between Bella Coola and Williams Lake. But the name does not mean whiter than white — it's local Indian for river of turns.

Then there is Sob Lake. Originally it celebrated the alleged ancestry of a grouchy old hermit who lived by the lake. Sensitive mapmakers first reduced it to S.O.B. Lake and then trimmed it to its current form.

Local history also played a big role in placenames. Australian in the Cariboo was named after a ranch owned by two former denizens of down-under while Zeballos is the handle of an qith-century Spanish naval officer.

Bonaparte is named after guess who, the Bligh of Bligh Island is the infamous captain of Mutiny-on-the-Bounty fame, who visited Vancouver Island in 1778, and 60-metre-high Brandywine Falls recalls a bet between two surveyors who wagered a bottle of wine against a bottle of brandy on the height of the cataract.

Cinema, which has no moviehouse, was named by an enthusiastic doctor who dreamed of the location as a Hollywood of the North — a great place to make films. There is no indication that Cecil B. deMille ever visited.

The diversity of people who flocked to B.C. over the last two centuries is reflected in the names. There is Sorrento, Edelweiss, Craigellachie, Van Winkle and Vaseux Lake.

Esperanza Inlet results from an odd quirk of history. Originally, it was named Hope Bay by Captain James Cook, then translated by a later visitor, the Spaniard Malaspina.

And Ne Parle Pas (Do Not Speak) Rapids on the Peace River was a warning to early river travellers to beware of a treacherously quiet but swift-flowing current ahead.

U.S. jobless rises but inflation cooling down

WASHINGTON (AP) - The unemployment rate in the United States climbed to 7.8 per cent in May, the highest in 3½ years, while inflation at the wholesale price level continued to cool significantly, the federal government reported today.

Since March, a rapidly developing recession has swelled unemployment by 1.6 percentage points — the largest two-month increase since the Second World War, the U.S. labor department said. About 1.7 million Americans were added to jobless rolls in April and May.

The unemployment rate rose 0.8 per cent for a second straight month, climbing from 6.2 per cent in March to seven per cent in April and then 7.8 per cent in May. It was the highest rate since November, 1976.

At the same time, the labor department said wholesale prices during May rose by only 0.3 per cent, down from April's 0.5-per-cent rise and the smallest monthly increase since September, 1977.

The increase in unemployment during May today prompted demands in Congress that the government take immediate steps to attack the recession.

Rep. Clarence J. Brown (Rep—Ohio), of the Joint Economic Committee, said the present recession "could have been avoided if the president had shown some courage and leadership and acted when it first became obvious that a slowdown was not going to be mild."

Brown said tax cuts for individuals and business, which the committee recommended a year ago, would have averted the present rise in unemployment. He urged their immediate adoption.

Rep. Parren Mitchell (Dem—Md.), one of Congress' black leaders, said high unemployment, particularly affecting blacks, contains the "potential" for racial eruptions such as that which recently occurred in Miami.

"The root cause of the explosion in Miami was the permanent unemployment that had been permitted to exist in the black community," Mitchell said.

"When," he asked, "will this nation learn you cannot permit a large segment of America to remain permanently unemployed?"

The latest price figures suggest significant easing in inflation later this year for U.S. consumers, who have been confronted with prices rising at an 18 per cent compound annual rate during the first three months of this year. During April and May, wholesale prices were rising at annual rate of only 4.6 per cent.

Wholesale refers to the stage of production for goods just before they reach consumers. Prices at that level are considered a good barometer of subsequent retail price changes.

The U.S. economy has been deteriorating since early spring with unusual speed and some economists believe the recession may approach the dimensions of the 1974-1975 recession, the worst economic downturn since the Second World War.

The recession has created more unemployment than the Carter administration predicted, but government economists say the downturn apparently is helping to cool inflation by dampening consumer demand.

During May, the number of unemployed persons increased by 889,000 to 8.2 million, with most of the increase due to layoffs and job eliminations. Total employment declined by 166,000 to 97 million.

Try Clark — better still let him stay in Iran: Goldwater

Times News Services

TUCSON, Ariz. — Republican Sen. Barry Goldwater said Thursday that former U.S. Attorney-General Ramsey Clark should be arrested and put on trial for ignoring a travel ban to Iran and taking U.S. foreign policy into his own hands.

"I don't know why the hell he doesn't just stay over there, change his name to Ayatollah Clark and grow a beard," Goldwater said in an interview with KTUC Radio. "I'd think he'd feel right at home."

Clark's agreement to a request by President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr to form a commission to investigate U.S. involvement in Iran during the reign of the deposed shah was "un-American," Goldwater said:

"I think he should be arrested and not necessarily put in jail, but I think he should be tried."

The New York Daily News reported today that Clark — who was U.S. attorney-general during the administration of former president Lyndon B. Johnson — will be detained by U.S. Customs officials when he returns from Iran.

Clark and nine other Americans, defying a presidential order forbidding travel to Iran, have been attending an anti-American conference in Tehran.

They are scheduled to return to the United States this weekend, although Clark indicated today that some of them may stay longer to explore moves to win release of the 53 American hostages.

During the controversial visit, Clark has told the Iranians the U.S. has engaged in imperialism in Iran and has offered to exchange himself for the hostages, now in their 216th day of captivity.

According to a report from Tehran Thursday, Clark indicated he would establish and head a non-government commission in the U.S. to investigate Iranian claims against the U.S. as a first step to winning release of the hostages.

The commission was said to have been suggested by Iran's President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr in a meeting with the American delegation to the conference.

Any hopes for success along these lines, however, appeared to be dashed today when Tehran Radio attacked former Clark as "the vilest American agent" and the conference on U.S. crimes in Iran said Clark might have been sent by President Carter like "a latter-day Rudolf Hess."

The conference, which ended today, said that despite his statements about the shah's crimes, Clark might have been planted by President Carter, in the same way Hess, Adolph Hitler's chief deputy, was believed by some to have been sent to Britain from Germany in 1941 on a mission intended to use psychological warfare against Britain and dupe the world — a contention doubted by most historians. Hess, 86, is still in prison.

A 12-point declaration that made no mention of the hostages was issued at the final session of the conference.

Two of the key points said Iran could seek compensation for the "enormous material and human losses it has incurred as a result of U.S. policies and practices in the past 27 years" and also was entitled to seeking the return of the shah.

Meanwhile, in his first public statement since he resigned as secretary of state, Cyrus Vance Thursday made it plain that his differences with the rest of the administration ran far deeper than a dispute over tactics in the hostage crisis.

The disagreement over the rescue mission was a symptom of Vance's almost total difference of philosophy with Carter and Brzezinski.

Among other things, Vance observed, there appeared to be "the pervasive fallacy that America could have the power to order the world just the way we want it to be . . ."

Cox News Service

ANKARA — Turkish sources say exiles from Iran are reported to be forming military units in Iraq and Egypt, the two Arab countries most opposed to the Islamic revolutionary regime of Ayatollah Khomeini.

The nucleus of the "Iranian Army In Exile" consists of some 7,000 to 8,000 officers and soldiers who have fled Iran since the overthrow of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. The bulk of this force is concentrated in Iraq, whose 1,280-mile border with Iran has been the scene of skirmishes since last March.

However, most of the strategy planning is reportedly going on in Egypt, the country which has given aslyum to the deposed Iranian monarch.

Little is known about the degree of co-ordination between the exiles and the shah himself, who is recovering from recent surgery in the closely guarded Kubeh Palace on Cairo's outskirts. Some diplomats believe, however, that the former shah has not given up his dream of returning to power and is actively involved in military plotting against his country's new rulers.

Scannable passports would speed traffic

MONTREAL (CP) — A new-style passport that can be read by machines as well as customs officials has been proposed by the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) to speed passenger flow at international airports.

The passport would be a card or booklet giving the same information as a conventional passport, but in a form readable by optical scanners for instant checking by computers, the United Nations agency said Thursday.

Because of its standard size and simplicity, the card could also speed handling by immigration agents at airports and border crossings where traffic is too light to justify installing expensive electronic equipment.

ICAO said its 146 member countries have received its proposals for standard dimensions and characteristics for the passport. The booklet format could contain visas and special mentions.

For years ICAO has also proposed that visa requirements be abolished for temporary visitors to foreign countries.

Derailment chases out 5,000 plus

GARLAND, Texas (UPI) — Nine railroad cars, including two filled with highly inflammable styrene monomer, derailed early today. Electrical power was discontinued to avoid touching off an explosion and more than 5,000 residents were urged to leave.

Fire Department spokesman Bob Murphy said one of the styrene cars was upside down and leaking. The other car also leaked styrene briefly until the liquid's level fell below the gash in the tanker.

Three other cars were loaded with liquid propane but were not leaking.

Styrene monomer, non-toxic but very inflammable and used for manufacturing plastic, has a flash point of about 32.2° C. Temperatures have gone above that in recent days and firefighters sprayed water on the leaking cars to keep them cool.

Convicted spy jailed 15 years

PRETORIA (AP) — An Oxford-educated university researcher, convicted of aiding and abetting black nationalists fighting to overthrow white rule in South Africa, was sentenced today to 15 years in prison under the Terrorism Act. His lawyer said he will appeal.

Renfrew Christie, 30, a white accused of nuclear espionage by gathering information about South African energy potential to leak to black militants, was found guilty on five of seven charges Wednesday.

Pretoria Supreme Court Justice F. Eloff sentenced Renfrew today to 10 years under one charge, and a total of five years under the other four — all sentences to run concurrently.

Christie, who was detained in October shortly upon his return here after completing a doctorate at Oxford University, had pleaded innocent to all charges.

A former deputy president of the National Union of South African students, Christie was employed at the South African labor and development unit at the University of Cape Town, researching the history of the country's coal mining industry.

His conviction and sentencing occurred the same week saboteurs blew up two oil-from-coal refineries and one conventional one in a simultaneous, three-pronged attack on one of South Africa's vital industries.

It was the first industrial sabotage by black nationalist guerrillas. The outlawed African National Congress, with which Christie was linked during the trial, claimed responsibility for the attack.

Losses sustained by Sasol — the South African Coal, Oil and Gas Corp. — from the attack exceeded $7 million.

Computer launches another false nuclear attack

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — For three minutes this week, an erring computer sent the huge U.S. defence network on alert status to deal with what appeared to be a Soviet missile attack.

It was the second such false alarm in seven months — the previous one having sent CFB Comox fighter pilots scrambling into the air in response.

The Pentagon said Thursday that the latest false alarm occurred early on Tuesday, set off by a technical problem in a computer at the North American Defence Command in Colorado Springs, Colo.

A number of Strategic Air Command planes, as well as U.S. Air Force Boeing 707s fitted with sophisticated electronic equipment and designed for use as airborne command centres in a nuclear war, were prepared for take off at an instant's notice.

The Pentagon said some computer displays at the National Military Command Centre, under the Pentagon, and at SAC Headquarters in Omaha, Neb., "indicated multiple missile launches against the United States."

Other warning systems contradicted this but a precautionary alert was put into effect while all the data was checked.

"There was no change in over-all U.S. defence posture and after an evaluation, all systems were returned to normal," the Pentagon said.

A spokesman said the time between the first false computer report and the decision that there was in fact no missile attack was three minutes.

The previous false alert, on Nov. 9, lasted six minutes and 10 U.S. and Canadian interceptor planes took off from three bases during that period.

The November incident was caused when a computer at NORAD, the joint U.S.-Canadian military nerve centre located in a granite mountain, accidentally sent some military bases a test tape simulating a Soviet missile attack.

The Pentagon spokesman said that on Tuesday the White House situations room was informed immediately of the missile attack report.

President Carter and Defence Secretary Harold Brown were told about it after the evaluation was completed. Officials noted the president can be contacted immediately wherever he is in any confirmed emergency, and would have been if the report was correct since only he could order a retaliatory strike.

While U.S. aircraft were placed on alert on Tuesday, a Canadian defence department spokesman in Ottawa said that there had been no change in the status of any Canadian forces as a result of the false alarm.

A spokesman at NORAD said the latest computer quirk was being investigated but the problem has not been pinpointed yet.

"We are not quite sure what caused the problem," she said. "It was probably something technical."

"It proves the system works," the NORAD spokesman said in noting how quickly the fake Tuesday report was checked.

New electric car battery hailed

NEW YORK (AP) — A new battery-motor system developed by Gulf and Western Industries Inc. may put peppier, inexpensive electric cars on the road by 1985.

The cars will be capable of 240 kilometres at 88 km/h on one charge for only about $3.45.

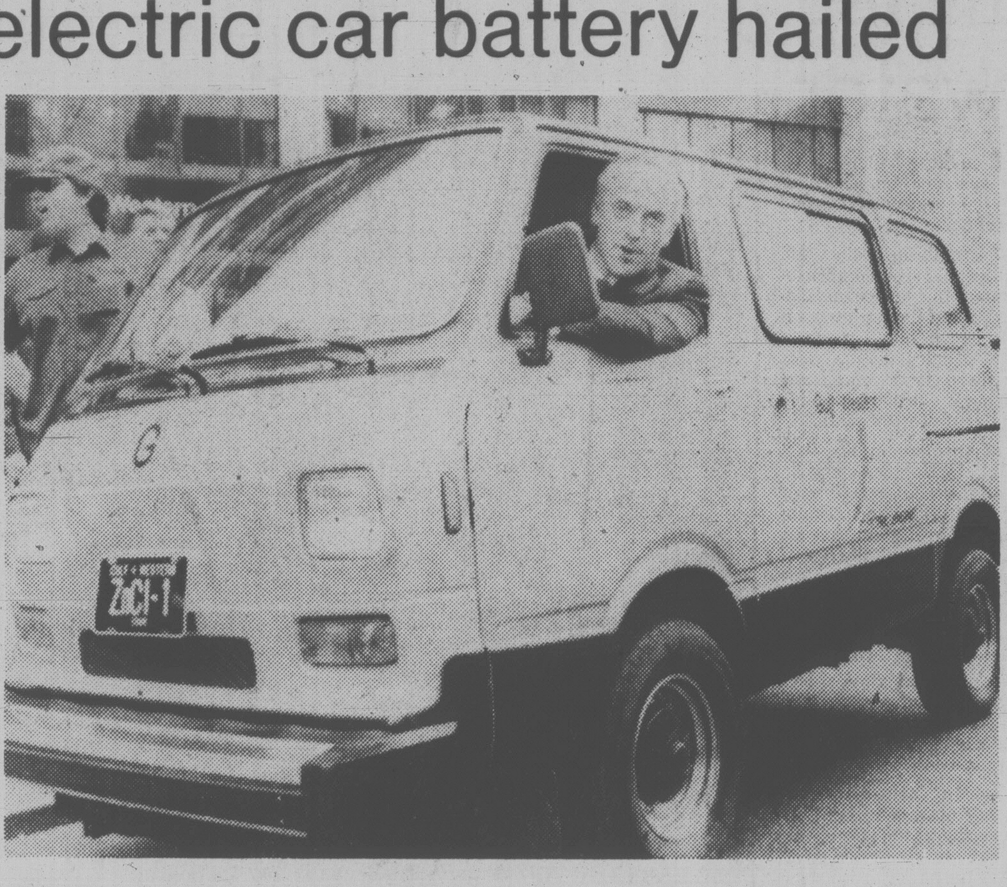
When installed in a compact car, the system would enable a motorist to drive 240 kilometres for about $3.45, compared with the $9.75 it would cost to run an otherwise identical car powered by a gasoline engine, Judelson said.

A car equipped with the system can accelerate to 50 km/h in 9.8 seconds and has a top speed of 105 km/h, Judelson said.



Planning to sell only the batteries and motors, G & W has opened a pilot plant

Security Council censures Israel over bombings

Times News Services

UNITED NATIONS — With the United States abstaining, the UN Security Council condemned the terror bombings that crippled two West Bank Arab mayors, criticized Israel for failing to adequately protect Palestinian civilians living under its occupation and urged it to compensate the victims.

Meanwhile, in another move sure to infuriate the Israelis, the European Economic Community was reported ready to say publicly for the first time that the Palestine Liberation Organization should be directly involved in Middle East peace negotiations and any settlement.

The 15-member UN Security Council voted 14 to 0 Thursday night for an Arab-sponsored resolution condemning the bombings and demanding Israel end its occupation of Arab lands "including Jerusalem."

Three months ago, President Carter disavowed the U.S. vote for a similarly worded Security Council reference to Jerusalem. Carter said the vote March 1 had been a mistake because he had wanted all mentions of Jerusalem deleted.

The resolution called on all nations to deny Israel aid in connection with Jewish settlements on occupied Arab lands.

Israeli Ambassador Yehuda Blum complained that the recent string of UN votes made no mention of Palestinian guerrilla attacks on Israel.

Blame for Monday's assassination attempts has focused on ultra-nationalist Israeli extremists who have threatened to silence Arab proponents of a Palestinian state in the West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza.

In a related development, two Palestinian mayors have rescinded their decision to resign in protest of the booby-trap car bombings that maimed two of their colleagues, mayors Bassam Shaka of Nablus and Karim Khalaf of Ramallah.

After meeting with Israeli officials, Mayors Elias Freij of Bethlehem and Rashad A-Shawa of Gaza City both denied they had been pressured into changing their mind.

Shaka's condition worsened Thursday and he was transferred from Nablus to the King Hussein medical centre in Amman, Jordan, for a gangrenous condition in one upper right thigh. Shaka, who lost both legs in the car bombing, refused to be transferred to a world-renowned hospital at Hadassah, Israel.

St. Helens dusting apples off the trees

Times News Services

WAPATO, Wash. — Apples are falling from trees at a finger's touch in Eastern Washington, apple basket of the country, thanks to a coating of dust from the eruption of Mount St. Helens.

The state — which leads the country in apple production — is expected to sustain fruit industry losses of at least $30 million because of volcanic ash, say Washington State University researchers, with apple orchards the biggest losers.

"It's terrible here," said orchardist Blaine Taylor. "The ground is just green with little apples. I've never seen a June drop like this and I've been raising apples all my life. I don't have a crop left, and that's all there is to it."

Meanwhile, seismologists at the University of Washington today reported a further decrease in "harmonic" tremors — the movement of molten rock beneath the surface — at Mount St. Helens.

Would-be sightseers were, however, warned that the volcano still was potent and to "keep in mind what has happened in the past."

Washington produced 40 million boxes of apples last year, one-third of the country's apple production. This year, some farmers report almost total losses.

The dusting of ash came from the May 18 eruption of Mount St. Helens in southwest Washington.

Max Williams, researcher for a U.S. department of agriculture research centre in Wenatchee said the ash is shading leaves.

"If you have a layer of anything blocking sunlight to the leaves, it reduces photosynthesis, which is what makes the fruit grow and mature."

Cosmonauts readying for space linkup

MOSCOW (UPI) — Two cosmonauts headed for a planned docking in earth orbit today aboard Soyuz-T-2 — the first Russian manned spaceship that is fully computerized and independent of ground control.

The Tass news agency said the newest pair of cosmonauts was heading for a docking, probably late today, with the Salyut-6 orbital laboratory complex, which already includes cosmonauts Leonid Popov and Valery Ryumin (in space since April 9) and the Soyuz-36 capsule.

I'm not quitting, Ted tells Jimmy

The Associated Press

Senator Edward Kennedy, emerging from a lengthy meeting with President Carter, declared Thursday he has "every intention" of continuing his uphill battle to wrest the Democratic party's presidential nomination from the incumbent.

"I have every intention of continuing in this campaign," the senator said.

Asked whether he had "a prayer" in taking the nomination away from Carter, the Massachusetts challenger replied: "More than a prayer."

Kennedy declined to discuss what the president said to him in their Oval Office meeting, at which no aides were present. The senator spent 68 minutes talking with Carter, who was unavailable for comment on what transpired at the session.

The senator also declined to say whether he would support Carter if the president, as expected, wins the party's nomination.

A similar meeting between former Republican rival Ronald Reagan and former president Gerald Ford produced exactly the opposite result, with Forident Gerald Ford produced exactly the opposite result, with Ford saying he would work "wholeheartedly" for Reagan, who is the virtually certain Republican nominee.

Threat working?

PORT VILA, New Hebrides (UPI) — The separatist rebels holding the South Pacific island of Espiritu Santo have reportedly bowed to a threat of colonial "gunboat" force to crush them and offered to negotiate with British and French envoys.

According to unconfirmed reports, Jimmy Stevens' rebels, who declared the island independent 10 days ago, sent their conditions for talks five hours before today's deadline set by New Hebrides Chief Minister Walter Lini.

Lini had threatened to crush the separatists with a military invasion by Britain and France if they did not lay down their arms and release their hostages.

Stevens, a copra plantation owner and his group of some 200 separatists — armed with bows and arrows, muskets and spears — declared an independent state rather than be part of the new state of Vanuaaku, as the New Hebrides chain of 80 islets was to be renamed after its independence July 31.

Ferry fare up, timing called 'a disaster'

Ferry fares for vehicles and their drivers are going up June 16 by 12 per cent and a further rate hike is in the works, Transportation Minister Alex Fraser announced today.

This time around there are no increases for passengers or bus riders.

He said the VIC sent several letters to Fraser begging him to increase fares only once a year at the most and only in the fall.

"Large amounts of money are spent sending out ferry information to tourist agencies and now all the data is out of date on the eve of the peak tourist season," he said.

Wood said he is not concerned about the amount of the increase but said the timing is a severe jolt to the tourist industry.

He said he has no objections as long as the increases are justified to the public and each increase is small.

The markup in ferry fares is probably the first of a series planned by the provincial government to cope with soaring fuel costs, Fraser indicated.

When the rates go up again and by how much, depends on the cost of fuel.

If oil prices take off again, ferry fares will have to tag behind, Fraser indicated.

The minister said the B.C. Ferry Corp. will monitor costs monthly during the summer and will take another look at its rate structure in the fall.

"Any change would take place probably when we are back to normal — say around the first of November."

He said fares will not be adjusted any more frequently than twice a year.

The vehicle and driver fare increases range from 25 cents on the minor routes to $1 on the major Georgia Strait routes.

For example, the charge for a driver and car travelling from Swartz Bay to Tsawwassen will rise to $13 from $12.

From Swartz Bay to Salt Spring, the fare goes to $6.50 from $6 and from Brentwood Bay to Mill Bay, the car-and-driver rate will be $3.25 instead of $3.

Freight rates are also increased. The tariff charged commercial vehicles will jump from $1.10 per foot to $1.40 on major routes.

"The ferry system will still provide the best travel bargain around," Fraser said.

And he made it clear the government has opted for the velvet glove approach to ferry fares this time around.

The last time, in 1976, it was very much the iron fist method.

Fares were doubled and the public was enraged. The government reduced fares slightly in 1977.

Today's changes are the first increases since that time.

The government's annual subsidy to the ferry corporation is expected to be $49 million this year, up $3 million from 1979.

But fuel costs alone are up $7 from last year and the fare increases will bring in less than $2 million, he said.

"We are anticipating additional revenue resulting from projected increases in traffic. That additional business will assist us in offsetting the deficit."

If fares weren't increased, Fraser said the deficit could lead to a deterioration in the quality and frequency of ferry service.

Late start on ferries

Ferry service between Nanaimo's Departure Bay and Horseshoe Bay began one hour later than usual this morning as ferry workers took part in a study session held to protest proposed pension changes.

The B.C. Ferry Corp. had sought Thursday to have the action ruled illegal but the Labor Relations Board rejected the corporation's contention.

The 6:30 a.m. sailing from Departure Bay was delayed one hour and further delays were expected during the day as three other study sessions were planned.

However, ferry management has scheduled the final run of the day for 11 p.m., only one hour later than usual.

A B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union spokesman admitted it was difficult to see how there could be only an hour delay at the end of the day when four study sessions of one hour each were planned.

But he said the jumbo ferries could make up some of the lost time and one scheduled sailing to Langdale had been cancelled.

The spokesman said the ferry workers will also take part in some action to protest the pension changes next Tuesday and on June 16, the days protest rallies are planned for Vancouver and Victoria respectively.

Details of what disruptions the public can expect will be announced well in advance, he said, adding that the action at the other terminals will be different than at Departure Bay.

The public sector unions are protesting proposed amendments to pension statutes which would limit cost-of-living indexing and increase employee contributions.

A-G orders probe of shooting

By JAKE BANKY

Attorney-General Allan Williams has ordered a thorough study of allegations that a fugitive was deliberately shot through the head after he gave himself up following a shoot-out with Saanich police in 1978.

After receiving a preliminary report from his staff, Williams said Thursday the case of Thomas Lackey is being very seriously considered because implicit in the allegations is the suggestion of criminal misconduct.

No time limit has been set on the review of the case by Associate Deputy Attorney-General Neil McDiarmid which falls far short of the full public inquiry urged by Lackey's lawyer, Craig Paterson of Vancouver.

However one of Paterson's major concerns apparently will be satisfied.

Williams indicated the Saanich police board will be forced to release the gunshot report on the shooting incident which it has refused to make public.

"I will be communicating with Mayor (Mel) Couvelier as chairman of the police board with respect to the report and what if any action his board proposes to take," said Williams.

He said McDiarmid also will receive a report from the Crown counsel who handled the case as well as transcripts of statements made by defence counsel.

Lackey was convicted of a series of crimes, including the attempted murder of Sgt. William Hillcoat in the shoot-out at McKenzie and Cedar Hill Cross Road, Nov. 8, 1978.

Lackey was sentenced to 18 years in prison. He is now at the regional psychiatric centre near Abbotsford, undergoing treatment for injuries received in the gun battle.

Hillcoat received a shotgun blast in the stomach and thighs. He is back at work now, but still has 36 shotgun pellets in his body.

At a police debriefing session in February this year, Hillcoat and Const. Robert Love were exonerated of any wrongdoing.

The session was told Love had Lackey by the hair, with his revolver pointed at Lackey's head, when the wounded Hillcoat stumbled into them, causing the gun to go off.

Gibbons charged that it was an attempted execution, not an accident.

Paterson, who represented Lackey in an unrelated civil matter prior to the shooting, wrote to Williams last month urging a public inquiry be held.

Gibbons also has supported such a move, as has Dr. Michael Jackson, professor of criminal law at the University of Victoria.

Constitution in year: PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday he wants a new constitution within a year.

He made the statement after New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent unsuccessfully introduced a motion in the Commons calling for a new constitution by July 1, 1981.

Some Progressive Conservative MPs appeared to yell "no," defeating the motion which required unanimous consent to be debated, even though it apparently had been approved by party officials. Ray Hnatyshyn, former Tory energy minister, later said the Conservatives were not responsible for defeating the motion.

Trudeau also agreed with a request by Opposition Leader Joe Clark to hold a parliamentary debate on constitutional change before the Commons adjourns for the summer, possibly at the end of July.

But he indicated he will not allow the debate to take place if the premiers object

Trudeau, under fire from Clark, said the government is not considering a national referendum on constitutional change "at this time."

He recalled he had introduced a bill two years ago allowing the government to conduct such a referendum, but the bill was never passed and he is not planning to revive it now.

However, he added: "I am not saying the matter is discarded forever."

Clark has suggested Trudeau is out to sabotage constitutional talks with the premiers, which begin Monday, by appearing unwilling to move on provincial demands. Trudeau would then go directly to the people for a verdict on his own package of reforms.

Trudeau said he has not made any specific proposals to the provinces for constitutional change and has not received any from them since the last constitutional conference in February, 1979.

Ray Perrault, government leader in the Senate, also agreed to a constitutional debate in the upper chamber and denied Opposition suggestions the government will conduct a referendum if there is no speedy agreement with the premiers on reforms.

Victim's estate must pay

MONTREAL (CP) — The estate and former employer of a man decapitated by a helicopter blade have been ordered to pay $20,072 to repair the aircraft and compensate its owners for money lost during the time it was grounded.

David Lee was killed in 1971 in northern Quebec when he walked into the helicopter blade after alighting to collect soil samples.

The court said Lee caused his own death by failing to observe elementary safety precautions.

Cross carrier goes missing

CALGARY (CP) — City police are investigating the disappearance of a Vancouver man attempting to drag a 50-kilogram cross across Canada.

Lloyd Lummis, 32, left Vancouver April 7 — Easter Monday — dragging a wooden cross, 2.4 metres by 4.5 metres, with a small wheel at the lower end.

"The power of the Holy Spirit" came to him last September and asked him to make the journey, he said before he left.

"The cross is meant to travel in the world of action," he said. "So many people need encouragement or evidence that Christ is real."

Officials said Lummis took about a month to reach here. About two weeks later, his cross was found lying at the bottom of a large hill under a railway bridge. Also found were two elastic cords Lummis used to attach a small knapsack to the cross.

Lummis carried no food or money, relying instead on public response for necessities.

Police nip $1,000 pyramid scheme

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver police hope they have nipped in the bud a pyramid scheme that began in California and swept up the west coast into Vancouver.

Vice squad members have raided a Main Street hall and arrested four Americans suspected of operating a pyramid scheme.

Three of them, released pending charges, fled back to the United States on Thursday, but one remains in custody. No names were released.

Police said that before the Wednesday night raid, about 100 people — businessmen, students, housewives — were listening to a pitch from a group calling itself California Business Concept.

Many of the people were clutching envelopes containing $1,000, money they hoped to multiply when their number was called and they could join a pyramid.

Under the scheme, the pyramid contains 32 people, all of whom contribute $1,000, except one, the leader.

At the outset, one person recruits two friends, each of whom pay him $500. They in turn each recruit two others, who pay them $500 each and the leader $500. This continues until 32 people are recruited.

When the pyramid is filled, the leader makes $16,000, with no investment at all. Then the pyramid splits and those on the second level begin new ones and so on.

The idea swept California recently where hundreds of thousands of people went to pyramid parties, hoping to turn a quick profit.

Police in Los Angeles and about 30 other municipalities began raiding the parties, citing a California statute that bans so-called "endless chains." Hundreds of people who had never been in trouble with the law before were arrested.

Police say pyramids are a classic con game, based on greed and mathematics which most people don't take into account.

A person is safe if they're at the top of the first pyramid. But because of exponential multiplication, a total of about 33 million people would be required to fill all the pyramids by the sixth split.

Mortgage fight got him fired?

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — A local real estate salesman says he was fired from one of the country's largest trust companies because he was a member of the Canadian Homeowner's Association, a group lobbying for lower interest rates.

Murray McLaughlin, 52, head of the association's Kitchener chapter, said Wednesday he was fired last week from Canada Trust Company, where he had worked for almost four years, because he circulated a petition to protest home mortgage rates that peaked at 16 to 17 per cent.

The petition, signed by about 30,000 people in the Kitchener area and about 1 million throughout Canada, urges that government control home mortgage rates.

"The higher-ups in the company had been on my back since I started with the association in February," he said. "I think that's the main reason I was let go."

"I guess they didn't like the idea of someone from the company going around trying to lower mortgage rates."

McLaughlin also directs the local 200-member real-estate sales association, formed to win better workng conditions for agents.

But Merv Roth, manager-broker of the 21-employee local office, said McLaughlin's firing was disciplinary, not a result of his other activities.

"There is no doubt in my mind McLaughlin was fired for legitimate reasons," Roth said. "He was an uncontrollable individual who caused problems around the office. I had no alternative but to fire him or let him destroy the functioning of the office."

"We didn't particularly care for his comments about mortgage rates but they had nothing to do with his firing. And we had no particular objection to his membership in the salesman's organization, as long as its demands were reasonable."

McLaughlin, now working for a smaller Waterloo broker, said he will not complain about his dismissal to the provincial department of labor.

Roth said McLaughlin behaved boorishly in the office, often subjecting secretaries to vulgar jokes and causing enough disruption that several agents had to stop dealings with clients.

McLaughlin disputed this.

"The company told me my language was bad, that I tended to swear a lot and disrupt the office. I agree I am no saint but it is not enough of a reason to fire someone."

He said his directorship of the salesmen's group was another reason he was fired.

"Brokers thought we were trying to form a union to curtail their activities. They figured it was not needed."

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market was sharply higher in active mid-afternoon trading.

Trading in shares of Cara Operations Ltd. resumed after a brief halt and by 2 p.m. the stock was up ⅜ at $18⅜.

The company has declared an extra dividend of five cents along with its semi-annual dividend of 15 cents. Both are payable June 30 to shareholders of record June 15.

Cara's directors have also proposed to subdivide each common share into one new common share and one new non-voting class A share. The proposal is subject to shareholder approval.

Among industrials, Falconbridge Nickel jumped 3 to $105, Markel Financial 1½ to $7, Imperial Oil B 1½ to $38¾, B.C. Packers B 1 to $50 and Imasco Ltd. 1 to $48.

Petrofina Canada dropped 1¼ to $50, TD Realty Investments 1⅛ to $23½, Cominco 1 to $57.

Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prices were up in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp. led trading in the industrials, dropping .05 to $6.10 on 38,545 shares and Canadian Javelin Ltd. was unchanged at $1.25 on 2,400. Daon Development Corp. was steady at $7½ on 2,000 and Proflex Ltd. was steady at .24 on 2,000. Taro Industries dropped .20 to $4.75 and Gulf Canada Ltd. was unchanged at $33⅜.

On the resource and development board, Golex Resources gained .01 to $1.20 on 97,300 shares and International Brenmac Development gained .02 to $1.60 on 54,940. United Westland Warrants declined .04 to .85 on 53,700 and United Fortune Warrants advanced .01 to .11 on 44,500. Rhodes Resources rose .04 to $2.35 and Silver Standard gained .13 to $1.72.

Nugold Enterprises led traders on the curb exchange, remaining steady at .61 on 52,000 shares and Double Eagle Resources gained .10 to $4.15 on 44,350. Goldwinn Resources advanced .12 to .75 on 34,000 and River Mountain Resources gained .06 to .78 on 33,000. Westward Energy advanced .05 to $3.55 and Westward Energy Warrants was steady at .95.

New York

Before the opening the U.S. government reported that producer prices of finished goods rose by a seasonally adjusted 0.3 per cent in May — the smallest increase they have shown in more than 2½ years.

The impact of that hopeful sign on the inflation outlook seemed to offset at first by news that the unemployment rate jumped to 7.8 per cent in the same month from seven per cent in April.

That marked the second sharp increase in a row in the jobless rate, and provided strong new evidence that the recession was taking hold rapidly.

Gulf and Western led the active list, up ⅝ to $18⅝. On Thursday the company demonstrated a new battery and motor system for use in electric cars and storage of power by utilities.

London

The Financial Times Index of 30 industrials closed at 428.5, up 5.1.

Industrials and golds advanced.

Canadian stocks were mixed.

Kimberley, B.C.
1972 - an amazing transformation happened in Kimberley, making it one of the most charming little towns in the country. The entire community banded together and transformed this typical mining community into "The Bavarian City of the Rockies." In only 8 months over 80% of the business section was converted to the authentic Bavarian styling. The downtown platzl (mall) features a block long bubbling brook, alpine huts, high country trees and during the summer months, a wandering minstrel. Happy Hans, official symbol will, with stein mug raised and arms outstretched, bid "Wilkommen Zee Kimberley" to all visitors.

Starscene

In an interview with Hugh Downs on his PBS Over Easy series, the stately but sprightly actress-dancer Alexis Smith discussed her stage tour of The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas, and characterized it as "the national company," as she didn't like hearing her troup called "the second company." "We think of ourselves as the best," she declared. Of course, she smiled when she said it. The guest of half-a-dozen game shows, she has just stepped into the lead role in the Broadway company, which presumably she considers the "first" and "best."

Show's creator gonged

The National Organization for Women has named Gong Show creator Chuck Barris as this year's "Grand Gobbler," — a dubious distinction. Barris was chosen on grounds he has "consistently demeaned women and showed over-all lack of good taste."

His award — a live turkey — will be accompanied by a note reading: "Chuck, included with this turkey are instructions on how to stuff it."

COLLECTIBLES

By JOHN HEARN

Mrs. Proctor of Kitchener, Ont., asks about the possible value of a set of Encyclopaedia Britannica, dated 1911 and 1922.

I get no pleasure out of being a bearer of bad tidings but I am not aware that they have any market value at all. Used book stores are reluctant to buy them for the good reason that there are no customers for them. This particular set is old enough to qualify for the curiosity value of a great deal of misinformation but apart from that they are of little interest.

John Adam of Vancouver has a leather shaving kit complete with razor and box for double-edged blades. It is gold-plated and bears the inscription: Compliments F. N. Archibald, Nanton, Alta. "Who would give it and why?" he asks. Presumably F. N. Archibald gave it, probably as an item of early business giftware. This, today, is a simply gigantic field from which will come a rich harvest of future collectibles.

There is a whole industry complete with trade associations, magazines and annual conventions, devoted to marketing some thousands of items used as give-aways by merchants and businesses, all imprinted with their names and addresses. These include pens, pencils, wallets, key tags, lighters, rulers, thermometers, calendars, and bottle openers, just to mention a few. They are authentic 'limited editions' in that the vast majority of production runs are less than 1,000 of any printed item and future collectors will have to content themselves with tightly prescribed sections of any one market — give-away key tags from Ford dealers in just one town, for example. Eventually there will be literature and museums in which F. N. Archibald's shaving kit may have a place of honor and an early example of the genre.

Helen Sweica of Ayr, Ont., asks about a print signed by Ridgway Knight dated Paris, 1888. This is certainly no area of expertise for me but neither do I know where information about obscure 19th-century illustrators is to be found. I may be doing Ridgway Knight an injustice in describing him as obscure but the question is one of a large number I receive in a similar vein. 1888 is the transitional date between early prints — engravings, woodcuts, etchings, etc. — and the photoreproductive processes which provide us with most of our illustrations from that time on.

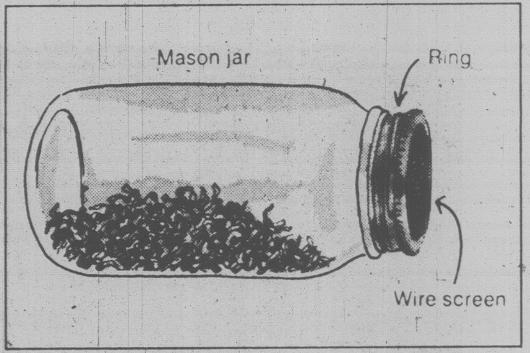
Until then, all 'pictures,' whether in books, magazines or sold for decorative purposes, were made on printing plates of some kind from an originaldrawing. The engraver was rarely the same person who did the original; he was a technician as opposed to an artist. He may have been an artist, too, but the preparing of good plates was a craft. Every single illustration of any kind surviving from that period or earlier, is either an original work of art or is a print in the proper sense of the word. Mere survival does not ensure that they were any good — any more than the survival of art works since that time ensures they are any good. We are no longer talking about collectibles as such — items which may be trash in themselves, but are of interest to collectors — but about fine art. Rembrandt commands enormous prices toay, not because his paintings are old or because they are rare, but because they are great.

Was Ridgway Knight a great artist? I do not know but that is the only factor which deterines the possible value of this print.

Mrs. Sweica, incidentally, collects paintings and prints of clowns and is very much in the market for any of the clown paintings done by comedian Red Skelton. I would be glad to pass on any offers to Mrs. Sweica from readers who have examples of his work.

Mrs. Norma Gilligan of Sheilacoom asks how to locate a dealer in military medals. There are, I believe, some people who specialize but mostly you can buy and sell through any good coin dealer.

Readers' letters should be addressed to Collector's Item, R. R. 1, Lowbanks, Ont., N0A 1K0.



You can grow bean sprouts in your kitchen, according to the Ortho book "12 Months Harvest." All you need is a mason jar and seeds. Place the seeds in the jar and fill it with water. Soak overnight and discard any seeds that float to the top. After seeds have been soaked, drain the water through a screen top and put the jar into a dark cupboard. Immerse in water and drain 2 to 3 times daily until sprouts form.

Making a flat roof peaked and insulating the ceiling

Q. We have a flat-roof house and have had so many problems with it that we want to put a peaked roof on. In the flat roof there is a 2-inch space between the bottom of the roof boards and the insulation. Can we simply insulate over the existing roof and put the new roof on?

A. First the 2-inch air space is usually not enough on a flat roof. This is because there is not enough air to cause movement to dissipate any vapour pressure that may get into the roof especially during cold days. I would highly recommend putting a peaked roof on the house but closing the vents in this vent space and filling the space with insulation. There are a number of ways that it could be done and likely the simplest way is to drill holes in the existing roof and fill it with a loose fill insulation such as vermiculite. Then add additional insulation by installing it on the top of the existing roof after you build your peaked roof. This can be in the form of loose fill insulation, rigid styrofoam SM board or fibreglass. Make sure that the roof is well ventilated. Ventilation is just as important as insulation. In the Victoria area you should have at least one sq. ft. of venting space for every 200 sq. ft. of attic space. Now that summer has come it is a good time to do this type of work. At least with the old roof left in tact you don't have to worry about rain coming and getting into the house as you are building the new roof.

We are planning on putting foam in our walls to insulate them. What do you think of the foam insulation?

A. I would expect that when you say foam insulation you are talking about Urea Formaldehyde foam that is pumped into the cavity wall. There are a number of other types of foams used in the construction industry, both wet and rigid foams, but Urea Formaldehyde foam is the one most commonly used. I have investigated this foam over the past few years and I've found that if the foam is installed correctly by a knowledgeable applicator who has taken a course in foaming and is with a reputable compan, there shouldn't be any problems. The problems that have surfaced are abnormal shrinkage and off-gas from the foam as it is curing. In my investigations I have found that abnormal shrinkabge is due to people not putting it in properly. Urea Formaldehyde foam is a manufactured product that is manufactured on the job site so careful quality control has to be exercised in order to have a good product. A considerable amount of time may be spent by the foaming contractor in getting the foam mixture just right. As far as the off gas is concerned I haven't found ay serious problems with it in Canada but then, I am not a toxicologist. Toxicologists are really the only people, along with medical doctors, that can determine the health effects of any gas or substance breathed into our systems. It seems that the problems with off-gas from Urea Formaldehyde foam insulation has had to do with improper installation. In a number of cases Urea Formaldehyde foam has been in attics where it should not be installed. It also has been installed in other areas such as bulkheads over kitchens cabinets, etc. where the thickness was more than 6 inches. In my experience Urea Formaldehyde foam should not be installed thicker than 6 inches. Remember that it is impossible to pump foam into a wall that already has loose fill insulation in it. About the only wall that can be re-insulated were insultion now exists is a house wall that may have R7 fiberglass or rockwool insulation with a paper backing. In this case the foam simply squashes the fiberglass or rockwool and replaces it with a higher R-factor of insulation. Do not have foam installed in any wall that has loose fill insulation such as zonelite, shavings, cellulose fiber or any other type. This insulation MUST be removed before foam insulation can be installed. I have a number of test sections that I have been monitoring over the last few years as well as I have opened up a number of walls that have had foam put in. The particular foam that I have used is called Rapco Foam. There are a number of other brands available in his area and the reader should investigate all brands of foam and make his final decision based on his own investigation.

Collection of seed packages makes ideal kitchen display

By PAULINE GRAVES

The joy of collecting is the thrill of discovery. And a bonus is the depth of knowledge acquired while ferreting out items to fill in or round out a collection.

Sometimes the increased knowledge leads down unexpected paths to an interest in related fields, and a whole new collection gets under way.

Particularly rewarding are those collections which can be used to enhance a house, as contrasted with those stored away in drawers and boxes.

The latter are dust free all right, but not much fun. A happy compromise is seen here.

A background in advertising leads to an interest in lithography and to old posters. A few old seed packets surfaced, and the collection was on.

Fortunately, for the sake of appearances, seed packets are all the same size and shape which makes for a good display. It's the old story: any motiff repeated makes interesting design, and when the moiff is interesting to begin with, the design becomes good.

Centred in the display, the anchorpiece, is a large poster picturing assorted vegetables. It, too, is old, and probably was an "in-house" advertisement used for display before printing was superimposed over the illustration. The white areas at the top and across the bottom were left clear to receive the printing.)

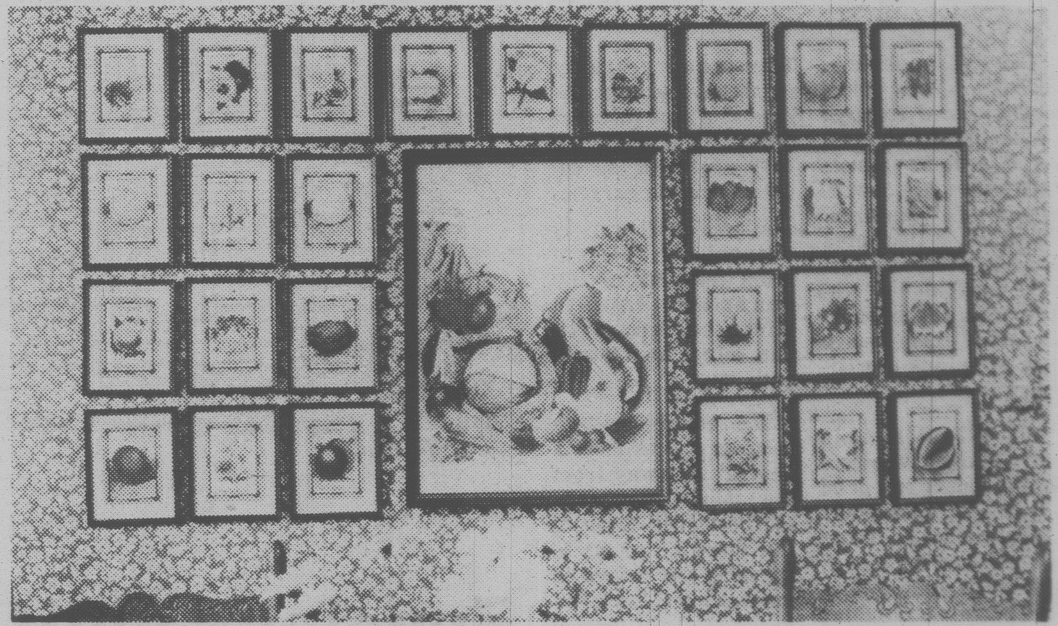
INTERIOR DESIGN



Although the seed packages here are old ones, present-day packages could be used. The problem is that modern ones often have prices cut into a corner or super-imposed on the design, in various places according to the illustration being used. This makes it more difficult to mat all packages uniformly, but a careful search of seed racks should turn up some that are workable. You might keep your eye peeled at rummage and garage sales for old packages.

PLAN FOR THE WEEK

This stylish split-level design is ideally suited to the narrow frontage residential building lot, yet it contains almost 2,600 square feet of well-organized living area. The finished floor area provides every conceivable convenience feature, from a large sunken family room/lounge to a spacious den/library.

The elevated main entry leads up two risers to a compact reception foyer and outerwear storage closet, from whence traffic moves either left and down to the large rectangular sunken living room, or straight ahead and down to the commodious family room-TV lounge. The living room features a raised-hearth masonry fireplace and a wide, projecting bay window with a window seat. The large dining room is elevated from the living room, and has wide, side-facing windows for natural light and excellent view.

The spacious U-shape kitchen/dinette combination has an excellent work triangle configuration, ample cupboard storage and generous countertop work surfaces. It connects to the dining room via space-saving pocket door, for easy access when serving formal dinners. A convenient snack bar counter divides the kitchen from the large dinette area, for quick snacks and children's lunches. The large family room-lounge is sunken seven risers from the kitchen-dinette, providing excellent separation of activities. The family room offers the conviviality of a second raised-hearth masonry fireplace.

Adjacent to the family room is a large laundry-utility complex and a two-piece vanity bath. The laundry-utility room could easily be utilized as a mud room facility, as it provides easy access to the enclosed twin-car garage.

The second level bedrooms are accessible via central stairway from the main hallway, as is the basement. Each of the three bedrooms is spacious and bathed in natural light. Each has generous closet storage and easy access to the central bath and linen storage closet. The spacious master suite has a full walk-in closet and a three-piece ensuite bathroom with tub. Sliding glass doors provide access to a large, front-facing balcony.

The mixed vertical and diagonal siding, twin brick chimneys and brick veneer, and the sharply-raked roof line provide the exterior of this design with a massive and informal appearance, which would make the home a welcome addition to any residential development.

Plans for design No. 80-2579 may be purchased either by the single set, at a cost of $85.00 for the first set and $15.00 for each additional set, or by the package. A five-set plan package, including the first set, is economically priced at $135.00 and an eight-set package, also including the first set, is only $175.00.

Whichever method you choose, please include $5.00 for postage and handling. B.C. residents add 4% sales tax.

Send for the current edition of Select Home Designs magazine, Series 44, featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas, plus 320 quality home plans of every type. Available for $2.75 ($2.00 plus .75 cents postage and handling).

To order any of these items please send cheque or money order, payable to the Home of the Week. Address to: Home of the Week, 382 West Broadway, Vancouver, B.C., V5Y 1R2.

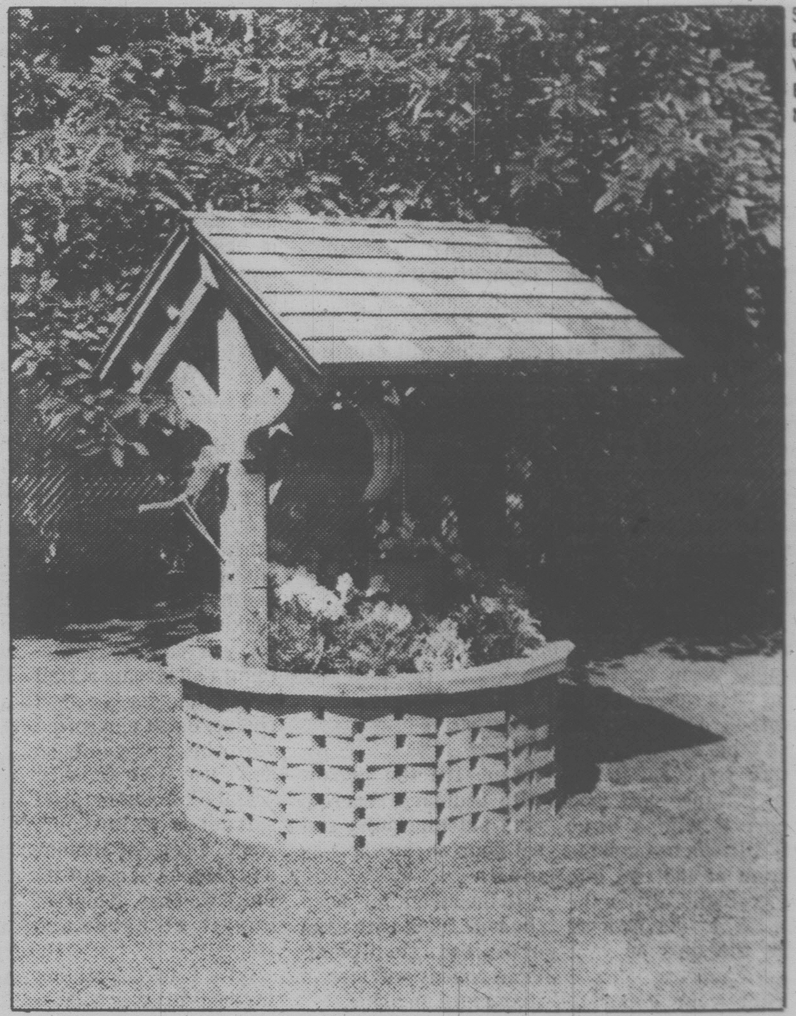
YOU CAN MAKE IT!

Send for plans to build this 'well'

By
STEVE ELLINGSON



Everyone knows that "clothes make the man", but let's twist that time-honored saying a bit to add . . . "accessories make the yard."

You don't have to be an antique buff to appreciate the handsome wishing well shown here. In addition to its decorative and rustic charm, it can be a very practical garden centre.

Whenever you have an informal outdoor party, the well makes a novel and ideal centrepiece from which refreshments may be served.

The old oaken bucket may be planted with flowers, or the artificial kind may be used so that they can be removed and the bucket can become an ice container. The ledge around the edge may be used for hors d'oeuvres, beverages, glasses and things of that kind.

The full-size pattern lists the necessary materials along with step-by-step directions and photographs showing all steps in building. It's easy and something that will last a lifetime.

The well shown was made of standard lumber sizes available from all lumber dealers. Redwood or red cedar are recommended, as either of these require practically no maintenance over the years.

YOUNGSTEROOM

- Use built-in furniture wherever feasible. It's functional, modern, and generally more appealing to youngsters than heavy, conventional furniture.
- Use easy-care floor coverings, and curtains, bedspreads and chair covers you can throw in the washing machine. A youngster's room is no place for fragile fabrics.

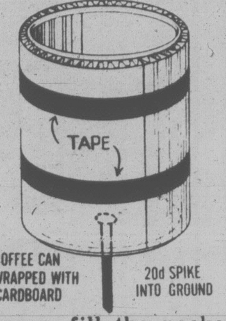
HAND AROUND THE HOUSE

How to allow for future roof when pouring patio cement

Q — I'm getting ready to pour a concrete patio off the back of my house. Right now I can't afford to cover it, but some day I hope to. Is there any way to provide some means of anchoring the posts I'll need to support the roof? I don't want to set anchor bolts now since they will be a hazard sticking up out of the concrete. — C.H., Milwaukee, Wisc.

A — One simple idea I've seen is shown in the sketch. Wrap a coffee can with corrugated cardboard and secure with tape. Place the can where you want to anchor a future post, and secure it with a large spike driven through the bottom of the can into the ground. Position the can so its top is level with the tops of your concrete forms.

Pour your concrete and finish it off as usual. Then, after it has set but is still somewhat soft or "green," remove the can. This will create a pocket in the slab. Whenever you are ready to build your patio cover, fill the pocket with ordinary concrete or a patching mix, and set your anchor bolt as usual.



In the meantime, keep the hole filled with sand or use it as a small planter so nobody will step in it and turn an ankle.

One last tip: Put the hole no closer than six inches from the edge of the slab. If you put the hole too close to the edge, strength will suffer.

Q — What material can I use to remove adhesive price stickers and the gooey residue they leave behind — E.T., Old Zionsville, Pa.

A — Ordinary paint thinner works for me. Give it a try. If the glue doesn't soften up after soaking for a minute or so, you can try something a bit stronger. Nail polish remover is a good choice, but it can soften varnishes and paints so don't use it on finished surfaces. Another good solvent is Weldwood's contact cement thinner and cleaner. It is safe on most finishes. You can buy it at hardware stores.

Q — I tried painting my son's dresser with an aerosol spray. The new paint was very slow in drying and in some spots caused the old varnish to wrinkle and peel away. The peeling seemed most severe where I had most carefully sanded the oil finish before spraying. What went wrong and what do I do now? — B.M., Fair Lawn, N.J.

A — The spray you used was based on a lacquer formula and its thinners attacked the old varnish. Now you will have to remove all the old and new finish and start from scratch. Use a paint remover according to label directions. Then sand lightly and refinish.

To avoid the problem in the future, do not use lacquers over old finishes. If you want to use an aerosol, read the label carefully and look for the ingredients list. If it contains a alkyd resins the paint will be safe over other finishes. If the can contains nitrocellulose or acrylic resins, it will be a lacquer.

Shotbolt Road

Thomas Shotbolt arrived in Victoria July 17, 1862, just out of pharmacists' school in England, the ink hardly dry on his chemist's diploma. Shortly after his arrival here he worked for another druggist, but soon was able to form his own business on Johnson Street just west of Government.

His business grew rapidly. Shotbolt's was quickly one of the best known stores in the place, and a centre for much talk of politics and gold in the Cariboo and on the Leech River down Sooke way. The drug store had mahogany fittings and cherry wood dispensing counter which came around Cape Horn in a sailing ship.

Mr. Shotbolt took his bride, Miss Lavinia Parmiter, to live in modest quarters over his store on Johnson Street. A lover of flowers, Mrs. Shotbolt always had geraniums in her window boxes, and chrysanthemums in bloom for Christmas.

In the mid-eighties the Shotbolts built a grand home on 10 acres on the western slope of what is now Gonzales Hill. At that time and for years afterwards Fairfield Road ended at Foul Bay Road, just outside the Shotbolt pillars of stone and the iron gate.
